Fast, Safe Flying.
Visiting the Upper Air.
Arrowheads of Gold.
Einstein as Second Fiddle.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 22.

J. R. WEDELL, brilliant young flier who manufactures planes at Paterson, La., flew down here from New York in five hours and one minute.

He planned a flight in four hours, but forest fires made him lose 170 miles. Five hours and one minute is good time for 1,200 miles, fire or no fire.

Mr. Wedell made the flight at the request of Henry L. Doherty, of New York, who has bought the two biggest hotels here, and plans, with object lessons, to show how near Miami is to great northern cities.

PILOT WEDELL, asked "when do you think flying will be absolutely safe?" opens his eyes with great surprise:

"Why, it is safe now, the safest travel, safer than railroads or automobiles. The only danger when I fly down here from New York in five hours is after I leave the plane and get into an automobile."

THE FIRST United States attempt to explore the upper atmosphere ended when Lieut. T. G. W. Settle and Maj. Chester L. Fordney came down in a New Jersey swamp, after sailing with a gas bag fifty-nine thousand feet into the air.

Eleven miles up into the air ocean above our heads is a good first attempt. It is as though some deep-sea fish should swim up a tenth of the mile from the bottom of water five miles deep.

When the two stratosphere fliers reached a point eleven miles above the earth they still had four hundred miles to go to reach the thin outside edge of our air ocean.

SOME DAY, perhaps, men will leave our atmosphere entirely, and go on to the moon, or possibly some near planet. But that will not happen soon.

Going 1,000 miles an hour, it would take five years to reach our neighbor Mars when it comes "near" us, within 40,000,000 miles.

WHILE PROSPERITY was sitting down, "just around the corner," everybody said hard times were a matter of "psychology." Now Edward Romfh, of this city, says the value of the dollar and the importance of our big gold reserve are also matters of "psychology."

Mr. Romfh is an able banker, his First National went through all the crash and crisis, the "big wind" and everything else undisturbed, while banks were toppling from the Canadian to the Mexican border and from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Says Mr. Romfh:

"Value depends on what you can do with a thing."

He tells this story. Spaniards roamed all over Florida establishing cities, including St. Augustine, the oldest, because they found here Indians using pure gold to make heads for their arrows.

They thought Florida must have wonderful gold mines when they found Indians glad to exchange a pound of gold for a pound of copper because the copper made harder arrow heads.

After awhile the Spaniards discovered that Florida Indians used gold because Spanish treasure ships on their way home from South American gold mines had been wrecked on Florida coral reefs. The Indians got their gold from those ships.

NEW YORK will give a benefit for Germans of Jewish descent "driven into exile by the Hitler government," with Prof. Einstein, whose property in Germany has just been confiscated, playing the violin.

The learned professor will play a double concert by Bach, as "second fiddle," something to which he is not accustomed, with the brilliant violinist, Toscha Seidel, as first violin.

VIA RADIO, the ether will carry Einstein's notes out into space, on and on, nobody knows how far. They might never stop going, except that Einstein says the universe is limited, or curves back on itself, or does something to free us from the frightful dilemma of infinite space and endless time.

You wonder with what the professor's notes will come in contact, when they get to the end of the universe. Is there a wall, a fence, or just an empty hole, how far does that hole extend, and what is on the other side of it?

With tickets to the concert at $25, the hall will be crowded. Many would rather hear Einstein play the violin than talk relativity. The violin is easier to understand.

THE NUMBER of deaths in childbirth is greater in this country than in any other civilized country on earth, a record that disgraces "the richest nation."

It is customary to attribute such deaths to lack of medical care. The New York Academy of Medicine reports that the incompetency of doctors is responsible for 61 per cent of "avoidable" deaths of mothers during childbirth, during the last three years in New York State.

"LACK OF judgment, lack of skill, or careless inattention" are attributed to the guilty doctors. It ought to be somebody's business to take an interest in that.

STATE LIQUOR STORE VOTE DUE IN HOUSE

BULLETS FLY IN MEAT STRIKE

Cattle Stampeded and Windows Smashed; More Men Return

Cattle were stampeded, shop windows broken, shots fired, false alarms of fire sounded and a dozen men arrested last night and early today in a fresh wave of violence in the meat workers' strike.

Despite the outbreaks, more strikers, it was reported, had returned to work today. Virtually all East End packing houses and distributors said their forces rapidly were approaching normal. The same was reported true of the Pittsburgh Provision and Packing Company, Herrs Island, and the South Side plants of Armour & Co., and Swift & Co.

VOTE TO STAY OUT

Meanwhile Judge George V. Moore, in Common Pleas Court, continued a restraining order order against members of the Packing House Workers' Industrial Union, barring them from interfering with the Hess and William Zoller companies.

Police reported two shots were fired from the hill overlooking the Zoller plant in Spring Garden avenue, last night.

A herd of 35 steers being driven from the stockyards on Herrs Island to the Penn Packing Company plant at 436 Pearl street was twice stampeded by strike sympathizers as the herd neared Thirty-third street and Liberty avenue.

The stampeding animals were rounded up by Lieut. W. J. Lavery and a half dozen policemen and again started on the way to the Pearl street plant under convoy of three radio police cars. At Thirty-sixth street the strike sympathizers struck again and the

7,000 MINERS GO TO 'POLLS'

Approximately 7,000 coal miners, employes of captive mines in the Pittsburgh district, are relying today on the secret ballot in the showdown over company unions and the United Mine Workers of America.

The election, under supervision of the federal government, is being held in accordance with the agreement negotiated three weeks ago by President Roosevelt with captive mine operators and the United Mine Workers representatives.

LEE TRACY

Actor Fleeing Police Of Mexico City Missing

MEXICO CITY, D. F., Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Lee Tracy, missing American stage and screen player, may have crossed the border last night at Naco, Ariz., or he may have spent the night at some emergency landing field between here and the border.

These two guesses, hazarded by pilots att he municipal airport today, were the nearest anyone came to determining the actor's whereabouts.

The airport, in the absence of definite information concerning the plane in which Tracy fled the city yesterday, decided to begin a telegraphic search to find it.

Not even the officials of the motion picture company with which Tracy i sassociated is connected, appeared to know where

GIRL SLAIN ON DOCTOR'S TABLE

Nude Body Found By Mother-in-Law, Physician

BULLETIN.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—(INS.)—Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop, prominent woman surgeon and civic leader, today was taken into custody by police for questioning concerning the operating-table murder of her attractive daughter-in-law, Mrs. Rheta Gardner Wynekoop. All other occupants of the old Monroe street mansion Dr. Wynekoop maintained also were detained.

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—The murder in an operating room of Mrs. Rheta Gardner Wynekoop was followed by swift and startling developments today.

At the Coroner's inquest a witness testified he found an empty chloroform bottle near her body and scratches on her face, evidence the pretty 23-year-old woman had been subdued with the drug and then shot through the back as she lay, garbed only in a slip, on an operating table.

Her mother-in-law, Dr. Alice Lindsay Wynekoop, testified she knew of no life insurance or other estate in the dead woman's name.

Coroner Frank J. Walsh asserted, on the contrary, he had learned that Dr. Wynekoop was the beneficiary of a $5,000 insurance policy taken out for Mrs. Wynekoop on November 11.

The mother-in-law disclosed that her son, Earle, had lived in a Chicago suburb since October 13, communicating with his wife only by telephone. She said he had left yesterday with a friend for the Grand Canyon. Search for him was started in the hope he could help clear up the mystery.

TARTANS, DUKES NEW GRID FOES

The football teams of Carnegie Tech and Duquesne will meet at the Pitt Stadium next November 17, and a second game will be played at the Stadium in 1935, on a date yet to be selected, it was announced today.

The Tartans and Dukes played to a scoreless tie in a charity game here in 1931, but the 1934 clash will be their first regularly scheduled meeting on the grid. The new local college grid rivalry is expected to be extended beyond the 1935 campaign.

Elmer Layden, Duquesne University athletic director, today, in a long distance telephone conversation with Miami University officials at Miami, Fla., accepted a guarantee of $3,500 to have the Dukes meet the Miami U. eleven in a Tournament of Palms game at Miami on New Year's Day.

SECOND VOTE FRAUD JURY DISAGREES

Third Case Postponed To Block Series Of Deadlocks

A second vote fraud jury disagreed in Federal Court today as the government took steps to prevent an epidemic of deadlocks.

After being out 24 hours deliberating the guilt or innocence of five election board members of the Nineteenth District, Fourth Ward, 12 sleepy jurors filed into the courtroom at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon.

FAR FROM AGREEMENT

Asked by Judge F. P. Schoonmaker of they had been able to reach a verdict, Foreman E. J. Ocker, of Turtle Creek, replied:

"We have not."

He added there seemed no prospect of an agreement.

The jurors were dismissed with instructions to report tomorrow. One of them said:

"The vote was pretty close."

The defendants concerning whom today's jury was unable to arrive at a decision were Joseph Tortorelli, judge; Malachi Tiernan and Irvin Braun, inspectors; John F. McNally and Bernard Grossman, clerks.

First Assistant United States Attorney James I. Marsh said the case would be retried.

REED ALARMED

Alarmed by the prospects of further disagreements, Special Prosecutor Earl F. Reed today asked for and obtained a postponement until December 11 of the trial of the third fraud case, involving five election board members of the Eighth District, Fourth Ward. One hundred and twenty-five witnesses who appeared to testify were excused.

Prosecutor Reed pointed out to the court that four men who were on the first jury were among the 28 called to the jury box, preparatory to choosing a jury for the third trial.

Judge F. P. Schoonmaker said he saw a possibility of submitting the third case to a jury that included members of the "deadlock" jury and granted Reed's request.

Defense Attorney E. G. Coll, protested the postponment. He declared:

NEW PANEL

A new panel of jurors will report Monday morning. The third trial was placed in the wake of three other fraud cases listed as follows:

Election board, First District, Third Ward, November 27; Tenth District, Fourth Ward, December 4; Sixth District, Third Ward, December 6.

Experiments

SPEAKING at Savannah recently President Roosevelt said:

"It has been remarked of late by certain Tories that those who are today in charge of your national government are guilty of great experimentation. If I read my history right, the same suggestion was used when Englishmen, protesting in vain against intolerable conditions at home, founded new colonies in the American wilderness, and when Washingtons and Adamses and Bullocks conducted another great experiment in 1776."

President Roosevelt is right again when he says that when the fathers of this republic founded a new government that was an experiment.

The test of new procedure is not whether or not it is experimental, but whether or not it is successful.

The experiment of "Washington and the Adamses" has been successful—enormously successful.

ON THE other hand the experiments of Aaron Burr in 1807 and of Jefferson Davis in 1861 were not so successful and, according to the opinions of all of us today, not so worthy of success.

Still at those times the proponents of revolution and secession and such extreme modifications of established American polity doubtless cited the success of the experiment of 1776 as a justification of their own actions.

On the whole, however, it may be set down as a sound general proposition that it is wise not to experiment too much with a successful experiment.

Most experiments fail. Some succeed.

Those which succeed should be dearly cherished and thoughtfully studied in order that we may come to understand fully their merits and enjoy to the utmost their benefits.

THUS, SINCE the experiment of 1776 has been, despite occasional troubles and problems, such a magnificent success, perhaps we should adhere a little more closely to its basic principles of national and individual liberty, of freedom of thought and speech and publication and action, and to its basic policies of independence and isolation in our relations abroad and of tolerance and reciprocal respect and consideration in our associations at home.

The Hearst papers believe most deeply and sincerely that Mr. Roosevelt is a good man and a great President.

We believe that most of his "experiments" are exceedingly beneficial and entirely necessary to an accelerated recovery, but we fear that some not only tend to retard recovery but contain a possible threat to popular rights and constitutional liberties.

We earnestly hope that the President will have the strength to carry through to complete success those of his experiments which are so plainly and so positively beneficial and the courage to abandon those which are not.

That was his avowed intention in the beginning and we trust for his own good and the good of the nation that he has not departed from that wise policy.

BATTLE SEEN ON PINCHOT MEASURE

Control Bill Passage Indicated Despite Cities' Opposition

BULLETIN.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 22.—A. Marshall Thompson, dean of the Pitt Law School, former Congressman Thomas W. Phillips, of Butler, and former Superior Court Judge Robert Gawthrop will be nominated by Gov. Pinchot as members of the new liquor control board.

Developments in state liquor legislation today were these:

2—The Senate postponed action on the proposed $2 a gallon tax on liquor already distilled.

3—Gov. Pinchot branded as "grandstand play" the threat of distillers to quit the state as a result of the $2 tax. The Schenley distillery, near here, closed.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 22.—Amended "satisfactorily" after a withering five-hour attack, the McClure liquor control bill, bulwark of the administration's liquor legislation, faced a turbulent House today on final passage as a special order of business.

A "test vote" during yesterday's hectic session when the House, sitting as a committee of the whole, tore the bill to shreds and then rebuilt it along the lines agreed upon by a three-to-one vote indicated victory by tonight.

The House Ways and Means Committee voted to report for passage bills imposing a $1 a gallon permanent tax on liquor after repeal and increasing permit fees for breweries and distilleries.

TAX BILL AMENDED

The tax bill was amended to exempt sacramental wines, medicinal preparations containing alcohol, and denatured alcohol. Permit fees for breweries were left at

BOY, 5, SHOOTS BROTHER, 3

They were playing in the attic this afternoon, Joseph Scioscia, 5, and his 3-year-old brother, Eugene, when suddenly a shot was fired.

Eugene tumbled over onto the bare floor as the bullet ripped through his chest and cracked against a wall. Their mother, her heart bumping, came running upstairs to ask:

"What happened?"

Joseph, with the innocence of his 5 years, replied:

"The boogey man shot him."

This happened in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Oreste Scioscia, at 927 Western avenue, North Side. The revolver was an Austrian automatic of .32 caliber which Orestes Scioscia had picked up during his service with the A. E. F.

Mrs. Scioscia grabbed Eugene from the floor, rushed to the street, hailed the first passing auto and handed her child over to a nurse in Presbyterian Hospital. There physicians said Eugene's condition was serious, but that he might recover.

Burglar Enters Attorney's Home

Attorney J. Boyd Duff, Jr., reported to detectives today that his home at 1214 South Negley avenue had been entered by a sneak thief and a purse valued at $20 and $6 in cash stolen. The robbery occurred some time Monday, the attorney said.

'First Lady,' Hatless and Coatless, Trudges Over W. Va. Farm Site

Mrs. Roosevelt Sees Progress on Plan To Aid Miners

She refrained from official comment as she viewed the 1,000-acre site on which her dream of building a self-sustaining colony rapidly is taking shape.

The wife of the President set out to investigate the old estate after an early morning automobile ride from Fairmont, where she arrived by train from Washington.

So eager was she to be about the task which brought her that she hurried through breakfast at the home of friends to lead the party on the hike. Mrs. Roosevelt discarded her wraps and set a stride which required the best efforts of Col. Louis McHenry Howe and others of the party to keep abreast.

At the conclusion of the tour she smilingly referred all questioners to Col. Howe, who, she said, was in charge of the trip.

The President's secretary, also a prime mover in the project said:

"This experiment is in line with President Roosevelt's plan to return destitute workers to the farms and on its success depends the development of more than a score similar projects throughout West Virginia and Pennsylvania.

"It is sponsored jointly by the Postoffice Department and the Department of the Interior.

"A postoffice supply factory is to be erected and the 200 or so families to be given homes will farm and work in the plant.

"The Department of the Interior is handling the actual development of the farm-sites and the building of the necessary homes."

Mrs. Roosevelt and party were to leave for Washington by automobile at 2 p. m.

Fisher Attack on N.R.A. Stirs Washington

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—Repercussion came fast today in the National Recovery Administration following ex-Gov. John S. Fisher's attack on the NRA before the Purchasing Agents' Association in Pittsburgh last night.

Steps were taken at once to determine whether Mr. Fisher had been quoted correctly.

Fisher's appointment as NRA head was more or less automatic through his position as president of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce. It had been taken for granted by the administration that heads of all large civic and commercial organizations would support the National Industrial Recovery Act.

At first there was a disposition here to doubt that the remarks attributed to Fisher were true, and NRA officials immediately started an inquiry to obtain the speaker's exact language.

Should it be found that he was so outspoken as reported, it is certain that action by Washington headquarters will be swift, although no formal statements on

SPRAGUE RESIGNATION FAILS TO INFLUENCE ROOSEVELT

MONEY POLICY OF PRESIDENT STANDS

Chief Executive Will Go Ahead With Revaluation

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—The administration went forward with its gold program today undeterred by the contention of Dr. O. M. W. Sprague that grave dangers lie ahead if the policy is pursued.

Resigning as special financial advisor to the Treasury, Dr. Sprague wrote to President Roosevelt that unrestrained inflation and a breakdown of governmental credit threatens as a result of the present monetary procedure.

The price of domestic gold was fixed today at $33.76 an ounce, unchanged from yesterday, with the dollar slumping again, carrying the world gold price upward from an opening of $34.41.

Senator Pittman (Dem.), of Nevada, in a message today to Sir George Schuster, at New Delhi, India, declared President Roosevelt was considering action even before Congress meets upon the silver rehabilitation agreement reached at the London economic conference.

ROOSEVELT FIRM

WARM SPRINGS, Ga., Nov. 22.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt will confer with Acting Secretary Morgenthau, of the Treasury, here late this week in pushing ahead with his gold control monetary program.

It was stated today at the "Little White House" that nothing special was up for consideration in the Morgenthau talk.

Meanwhile, Mr. Roosevelt said nothing about the resignation of O. M. W. Sprague as special adviser to the Treasury.

JOHNSON VISIT

Gen. Hugh S. Johnson, industrial administrator, will come here tomorrow or Friday. Secretary Ickes, the public works administrator, is coming down to the presidential cottage. William C. Bullitt, newly-appointed Ambassador to Russia, and Harry L. Hopkins, federal relief administrator, are other prospective visitors.

Mr. Roosevelt said today the real purpose of the Johnson visit was his belief that this industrial administrator needed 24 hours of rest. Incidentally he will look over any codes he brings along and the word from Washington is that Johnson is carrying with him the motion picture and possibly the newspaper code.

An inquiry today at the "Little White House" about reports of a visit by Henry Ford brought the reply that the President knew nothing of a visit here by the automobile manufacturer.

A Changed Diagnosis? -:- By QUIN HALL

WOODIN RAPS SPRAGUE

International News Service.

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—(INS.)—Emerging from his retirement to reaffirm the solidity of American finances, Secretary of the Treasury William H. Woodin today took sharp issue with Prof. O. M. W. Sprague, who resigned yesterday as financial adviser to the government.

Woodin said:

"I must seriously criticize Dr. Sprague for the assertion he practically makes that the United States Treasury is placed in a position where it must borrow $2,000,000,000 from the people on bad security.

"In any way to suggest that the United States government bonds are or can be or will be in any sense bad security is not only a reflection on the wealth and integrity of this country and its people, but impeaches Dr. Sprague's own common sense and competency as a student of finance."

FIND GIRL SLAIN ON TABLE

Another hunt was in progress here for a narcotic addict who might have entered the physician's office in search of drugs.

Mrs. Wynekoop, talented violinist and artist, was found dead last night on an operating table in the basement of the 16-room home of her mother-in-law.

There was a single bullet wound beneath her left shoulder blade, fired through the heart. Nearby lay a pistol from which three shots had been fired. The young woman's clothing was piled neatly on a chair.

LOVE NOTE FOUND

To make the weird murder even more uncanny, there were many of the elements of a detective mystery thriller—a mysterious telegram, a passionately termed love note, scratches as from sharp fingernails on the victim's face, reports that a drug addict had frequented the home to do odd jobs.

The young husband first was reported en route to Arizona with a friend, Stanley Young, to take photographs of the Grand Canyon. An hour before the body was found, face downward and wrapped in a blanket, Dr. Wynekoop received a telegram from Peoria, Ill., that read:

"Stanley has domestic difficulties. Starting home tonight."

It was signed with the initial "E."

Dr. Wynekoop said shortly before the inquest that her son had lived since October 13 in the Chicago suburb of Beverly Hills, that he had communicated with his wife only by telephone, and that she believed he had left yesterday for Arizona.

Police at Peoria learned the message had been telephoned to the telegraph company by a man who identified himself only as being "on my way to Kansas city." No one had left Peoria by train or motor bus for that destination.

Chicago police said they had no reason to suspect Wynekoop, but they believed he could clarify the telegram and the love note, found among the victim's possessions.

'AN HOUR WITH YOU'

The note read:

"Precious—I'm choked. You are gone—you have called me up—and after 10 miutes or so I called and called. No answer. Maybe you are sleeping. You need to be, but I want to hear your voice again tonight—I would give anything I have to spend—to spend an hour in real talk with you tonight—and I can not—good night."

The letter was written in feminine hand and dated "Sunday night."

As police reconstructed the slaying and events leading up to it, Mrs. Wynekoop left her mother-in-law's home for an hour yesterday afternoon on a neighborhood shopping tour. She returned at 3 p. m., and met Dr. Wynekoop leaving the home.

Dr. Wynekoop returned in the early evening, ate dinner with Mrs. Vera Duncan, a border in the home. Not until about 8 p. m., did she have occasion to enter her basement office and consultation rooms. It was then she found the body.

The pistol was identified as Dr. Wynekoop's. One bullet had been fired by accident a week ago, she said. A second killed the young wife. The third discharged bullet was unexplained.

The inquest was adjourned to give the police more time to investigate.

IHLDER HEADS SLUM WAR

John Ihlder, executive director of housing associations in Pittsburgh and Boston, has been appointed secretary of the Federal Housing Corporation's slum razing project in Washington, according to word received here.

As yet, no definite plans for slum clearance have been announced in Pittsburgh, although the Pittsburgh Housing Association together with a group of architects has been making preliminary studies.

Ihlder has been in Washington this week. He is also associated with the Public Works Administration as a housing expert.

Work on the Washington project will start soon, it is reported. It is proposed to wipe out slum districts of considerable size and construct new low cost homes.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt has agreed to serve on the advisory committee. It is planned to use the Washington development as a model to show the country what can be done with blighted districts.

King's Boyhood Pal Dies in Poverty

TORONTO, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Without a friend or a relative present, Sir James O'Donohue, boyhood companion of King Edward VII, was buried here yesterday. A newspaper reporter and the employes of a funeral chapel were pallbearers.

Since he lost his fortune here shortly after the war, Sir James lived in near-poverty and without friends.

ALDRICH BACKS BANK REFORM

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—A sweeping reform of banking practice that will bar a bank officer from holding office or sitting on the board of directors of any other corporation will be recommended to the Senate committee on banking and finance by Winthrop W. Aldrich, chairman of the Chase National Bank and brother-in-law of John D. Rockefeller, Jr., it was learned today.

The recommendations are to be presented by Aldrich at the conclusion of the Senate committee's present inquiry into the affairs of the Chase bank.

A statement to this effect has already been prepared by Aldrich, and, according to friends of the bank, the recommendations may be broadened to take in bank directors as well as officers.

This step, if incorporated into the new banking legislation when Congress sits in January, will force a drastic revision in the setup of boards of directors, finance and executive committees of some of the most important corporations in America.

TRACY MISSING AFTER FLIGHT

their star had gone. It worried them, they said:

Tracy left town after being released on charges of offending the public morals, although police said he had promised to remain here pending investigation.

Added to the confusion regarding the whereabouts of Tracy, there were contradictory reports among officials and newspapers here as to the manner of his leaving town.

Although officials generally were certain that the actor left by airplane, some of the police still maintained their assertion made yesterday that they escorted him to the international train bound for Laredo, Tex.

Tracy, reported missing "somewhere in Mexico," was just cheering a parade and "doing nothing in particular" when the trouble started in Mexico, D. F., Tracy's director, Harold Hawks, said here last night.

Explaining the Tracy incident, Hawks said:

"I got a call from the hotel where Tracy was staying, saying the actor was creating a disturbance. I told them to hit Lee over the head with something and put him to bed until he sobered up."

Hawks added:

"Tracy had been working hard, and I guess he wanted to throw a good one on his last night in Mexico City."

Lindberghs Delay Flight From Azores

HORTA, Azores, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Col. and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh, who flew here yesterday from Lisbon, plan to take off tomorrow for a return flight to the continent by way of the Island of Saint Michael.

The plans for the flight, is was said, depend on the weather. The exact destination was not announced.

FILM KING FOX TOPPLED BY CHASE BANK

$28,050,000 Loss By Public in Movie War Revealed

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—By extending lavish credit to a bankers' syndicate, the Chase National Bank, of New York, was responsible for the 1930 overthrow of William Fox as a movie czar, it was revealed today at the Senate banking inquiry.

Harley L. Clarke, Chicago capitalist who participated with the bankers, gave the bank credit for financing the battle on Fox. A resume showed the bank's loans to Fox's enemies totaled $103,685,000 in about 18 months. Clarke said in a memorandum found in the Chase files:

"If it had not been for the Chase, I could not have gotten the money."

PUBLIC LOSS BARED

Ferdinand Pecora, special Senate counsel, next revealed a $28,050,000 loss by the public in bonds of the General Theaters Equipment Corporation, used by the bankers in their fight on Fox. This loss was suffered by the public in its purchase of a $30,000,000 bond issue. The bonds were issued May 1, 1930, to finance extension of the banker's movie empire. A purchasing group of bankers paid the corporation $27,000,000 for the bonds and resold them six days later to a selling group for $28,950,000.

This represented a profit to the bankers of $1,950,000 in six days, without investment of a dime.

The selling group borrowed $27,150,000 from the Chase Bank May 7 to pay the bankers. This group, in turn, sold the bonds to the public at a gross profit of $900,000—all on money borrowed from the Chase Bank.

The public bought the bonds at 99½—$995 for a $1,000 bond and $99.50 for a $100 bond. The corporation since has gone into receivership and the bonds now sell at $6.

The public's loss in two and a half years totaled $28,050,000.

PECORA IN CLASH

Pecora asked Murray W. Dodge, a Chase Bank official, today's witness:

"Are there any controversies between banking houses on what might be called 'gravy' in the spread of these issues?"

Dodge would not agree to the propriety of calling the banker's profits "gravy."

Pecora produced a memorandum, written by Dodge to Albert H. Wiggin, in which the witness used the word "gravy." It made even Dodge laugh.

In the memorandum, Dodge told Wiggin that with Halsey Stuart & Co. "out" it would be possible to discuss future financing of the movie empire with Kuhn, Loeb & Co. Dodge said he disliked bringing in the new firm because "a split up of the gravy will hurt my feelings."

Stock Exchange Probes Huge Sinclair Oil 'Pool'

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—(INS.)—Disclosure before the Senate stock market probe of the enormous profits made by a pool in Sinclair Oil Corporation common stock during the 1929 bull market today brought an investigation by the stock exchange into the activity.

The object is to discover if "wash sales" or other irregularities occurred during the manipulation of the stock.

A profit of $12,000,000 was gleaned by the pool, which included Harry Sinclair, head of the company; Arthur W. Cutten, noted grain and stock market operator, and officials of the company, it was testified. The exchange probe will cover the period from October, 1928, to April, 1929, when the pool was in operation.

AD BARES DEATH OF WIFE

JAMESTOWN, N. Y., Nov. 22.—(AP.)—An advertisement in an Erie, (Pa.), newspaper offering their 13-month-old baby for adoption started Clayton Van Natter, 31, of Jamestown, on a search which he said today ended at the grave of his wife, who left here six weeks ago. He had not known of her death.

A sister-in-law in Erie told him, he said, that his wife's dying request was that he not be notified of her illness or death.

The baby was adopted by an Erie family, he said he was told. Van Natter said his wife's relatives refused to tell who had adopted the child and he did not see it.

He said his wife went to live with her relatives because he was out of work. There are two other children, five and six years old, here with the father.

1,000 JOBLESS ASSURED WORK IN COUNTY

City Projects Taken Over in Relief Program

Employment that will take at least 1,000 workers from the county relief rolls in a few days was assured today as County Civil Works Administrator James L. Stuart took over 30 works projects from the City of Pittsburgh and gave consideration to 28 additional city projects.

Representatives of the County Commissioners said that Administrator Stuart had tentatively agreed to approve two county projects, the regrading of two and a half miles of Pierce Hill road and the grading of part of the Catfish Run road. Final approval awaits estimates of cost and the number of men to be employed, E. L. Schmidt, county engineer, said.

Fourteen hundred men, taken in recent months from the relief files of the Allegheny County Emergency Association and put to work on 30 improvement jobs by the city under the city's $300,000 relief bond issue, today are working under the Civil Works Administrator, as a result of his action late yesterday.

URGES SPEED

As only $100,000 of the bond issue has been paid out to them, it is Stuart's hope that the remaining $200,000 will be spent by the city on materials with which 1,000 additional workers may be employed.

The present relief work payroll on these city jobs is about $3,000 a day, according to Administrator Stuart, but the 28 additional programs presented to him would provide three months' employment for approximately 9,455 men at a cost of $2,617,000, according to Public Works Director Edward G. Lang.

These projects are for grading of dirt streets, construction of brick gutters, sidewalks, pipe lines, sewers, playground and park improvements.

OPEN HEADQUARTERS

Creation of a skeleton organization to immediately receive applications for works projects was announced by Administrator Stuart today, with the opening of CWA headquarters in the Oliver Building through the courtesy of the Oliver estate.

Besides Stuart, the initial set-up includes Cecil M. Haggart, Pittsburgh engineer appointed by State CWA Administrator Eric Biddle as field engineer; E. C. Dunbar, of the Allegheny County Emergency Association, who will handle all applications for works projects from boroughs and townships, and Charles Gurlitz, controller.

HIRE EXPERTS

An organization of unemployed engineers and technical and clerical help will be set up shortly to carry on the necessary investigations on proposed works programs. Stuart announced that these men will be hired through the Federal-State Employment Office.

Consideration will be given to municipal works proposals that have to do with street improvement, sidewalks, roadways, sewers, playgrounds, parks and pipe lines and other projects of this nature, Stuart explained today.

After CWA applications have been approved in Harrisburg, municipalities will have to file requisitions for labor with Maj. H. F. Bucher, director of the Federal-State Employment Office here, who will select the workers from his list of relief cases and unemployed, Stuart explained.

NORRIS FOR NEW POWER PLAN

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Senator Norris (Rep.), of Nebraska, moving spirit for years in the Tennessee Valley development plan, said today he would introduce a bill when Congress meets to accomplish the same ends for the Missouri River.

Norris made his announcement to newspapermen upon his return to Washington from the West.

He said his plan, together with Cove Creek dam on the Clinch River in Tennessee, would harness enough water to "control the flood waters of the Mississippi."

Norris believes he can get administration support for the bill he is now framing, and recalled that when President Roosevelt signed the Tennessee Valley-Muscle Shoals bill he said this was but the beginning of a nationwide system to develop power, improve navigation and provide irrigation and flood control.

FISHER STIRS WASHINGTON

STANDS BY SPEECH

John S. Fisher, former Governor and head of the Pittsburgh district's NRA committee, today agreed that he was quoted "substantially correct" following a talk last night before the Pittsburgh Purchasing Agents' Association.

He was quoted as stating the NRA was "unsound," and that he was skeptical of it when he assumed the post as local head, adding:

"I am not sure that its operation has not vindicated that statement by this time."

Fisher also stated, according to last night's quotations:

"I wish we had more of the old-time statesmen such as Matthew S. Quay and Boies Penrose, and believe David A. Reed is the outstanding leader in the Senate."

Asked today whether or not he had been misquoted, Fisher told the Associated Press:

"The quotations were substantially correct. I might have been more careful in my phraseology, but it was my understanding that there were no newspapermen present.

MONEY CONDITIONS

"My speech was to the effect that the weakness in the NRA was due to our money conditions not having been taken fully into account, so that money sorely needed to finance the business projects was not available. However, efforts are now under way to relieve these conditions."

Regarding the constitutionality of the Recovery Act, he said:

"NRA's constitutionality had been seriously questioned, but we are waiving that in an effort to restore our business. We are now being treated to a sort of empirical statesmanship, with conditions changing from day to day."

Mr. Fisher said he was sorry he omitted the late Senator Knox from the Quay-Penrose bracket.

Mr. Fisher was former state banking commissioner and Governor, and now heads a Mellon-controlled insurance concern.

Coast Guard Merger With Navy Reported

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Reports that the Coast Guard would be merged with the Navy were again current today, but were not officially confirmed.

WIFE SOBS TALE OF KILLING CLARK

'Loved Him Terribly' Cries Show Girl; Blamed Drink

By DOROTHY KILGALLEN

International News Service.

PAULSBORO, N. J., Nov. 22.—Mrs. Audrey Smith Clark, former show girl, told her story today, told it between sobs as she sat propped up on her hospital cot where she awaited a bedside hearing on a charge of slaying her wealthy young husband, Sheldon A. Clark, oil executive and sportsman. She said:

"He was a perfect prince, when sober, but when drunk he bragged about the women he could get. But I loved him, loved him terribly."

Was it true that she had once had detectives shadowing her husband? Yes, it was true. She said frankly:

"It was in Baltimore, last March. Yes, I did that because I was suspicious."

"Of anyone in particular?"

"No, I was suspicious of all of them."

PARTED OFTEN

Her husband beat her, she said, and she left him many times, taking thec hildren with her. But quickly she added:

"I loved him terribly. Oh, I can't remember all that has happened. If only I could remember."

And then she told what she does remember:

"I got home between 4 and 5 and went to the bar. Shelden was there, playing billiards. His cousin asked him to dinner and hten said to me: 'Are you made because I asked him?'

"I said, 'No, he is old enough to know what to do' and with that I went upstairs. Sheldon called after me, but I don't recall what he said.. I went into the living room and began to read a paper.

HIT WITH CUE

"The next thing I knew Sheldon came up and hit me with a billiard cue. I don't remember anything after that."

"Do you remember getting the revolver?"

Mrs. Clark sobbed:

"Oh, Lord, no. You don't think I would have shot him if I did remember what it was all about?"

Mrs. Clark appeared in improved health, although hysterical at times. Her head was bandaged, almost completely covering her reddish hair.

She was cheered when her lawyer brought word that the Clark family bears no malice toward her. Her father-in-law, Sheldon Clark, is reported ill in Philadelphia, and her husband's brother, Harry, is making arrangements for the Clark funeral.

PLEA REVEALS SUICIDE PACT

Lawrence L. W. Zimmer, 34, was sentenced by Judge Schoonmaker to serve six months in jail when he pleaded guilty to violating the Mann act. The case involved a 15-year-old girl whom it was charged he took to Detroit, New York and other cities.

Counsel for the defendant gave the court a letter, which indicated a suicide pact. Judge Schoonmaker said:

A.W.O.L. Vassar Girls Suspended Over Party

By DOROTHY DUCAS

International News Service.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Nov. 22. — Two girls have been suspended and more than a dozen "warned" at fashionable Vassar College on the Hudson, for taking advantage of the freed om granted undergraduates in their comings and goings on the campus, it was learned today.

Although the names of the culprits are being withheld, it was said the girls had run into trouble by failing to "sing out" before they went to Poughkeepsie or to New York for evenings of merriment.

It is not forbidden to stay away from college overnight, provided girls sign in large "leave" books perched on the ground floor of every dormitory, registering where they are going and who their chaperone will be.

The two who were suspended are said to have been members of a large party which spent the night in Poughkeepsie, several miles by trolley car or bus from the graystone buildings that stand on a cliff overlooking the river.

Poughkeepsie residents, not used to self-government rules which allow more freedom than in the days when mother went to college, have expressed themselves shocked with the frequency of "nights out." It was the protests of townsfolk that led to the discovery of the rules-breaking.

Students refused to discuss the situation, much less to divulge the identity of their comrades, who had been the victims of the new regime of vigilance instituted by Dr. Henry N. McCracken, president.

Sandpaper Tights Lose Bout for 'Wrassler'

INDIANAPOLIS, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Al G. Feeney, Indian's three-in-one fire marshal, state police chief and athletic commissioner, pondered today on the problem of which of his powers he should invoke in dealing with the case of Chief Chewchki, heavyweight wrestler.

The Chief, billed as being from Ardmore, Okla., set the fans afire, disturbed their peace of mind and committed a breach of athletic etiquette when he came into the ring last night for the third and deciding fall of a wrestling match with two pieces of sandpaper studded with carpet tacks tucked down in his tights.

The Chief's opponent was "Irish" Pat O'Shocker, of Salt Lake City, recent favorite of the Detroit Society Grand Dames who not long ago were reported to have been delighted with his drawing room demonstrations of the grappling art.

The Chief had taken the first fall but had lost the second last night. He started out earnestly to win the deciding fall and flopped the curly-headed O'Shocker who, however, wriggled from beneath the ponderous redskin and darted for the ropes rubbing his bare legs and gesticulating toward the Indian's tights.

Referee Heze Clark backed the Chief into a corner and, while the fans howled, pulled off the Chief's tights, leaving him with not much more covering than a fan dancer. From the tights Clark extracted the tacks and sandpaper and awarded the third fall to O'Shocker.

One facetious fan asked:

FLIES TO DEATH IN BORROWED AIRPLANE

Junior Leaguer's Act Laid to Despondency Over Husband's Death

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Restless waters of the broad Atlantic today apparently formed a grave for Mrs. Louise Hurck Stanton, who borrowed a plane and flew seaward to meet death wherever the craft's fuel ran out. The 30-year-old Junior Leaguer had recently lost her husband in an automobile accident.

In notes left behind she asked that it not be called suicide—for "I particularly dislike the word suicide" — and explained she just wanted to go "out into space and find out what it's all about, and if there isn't anything—that's O. K., too."

Mrs. Stanton

It was hours after she flew eastward in the borrowed plane with about enough gasoline to last four hours and take her some 350 miles to sea, that airport authorities found the notes and began a search. It was too late then. Then, too, in her notes she had begged them not to undertake a dangerous search which, she said, "wouldn't do any good."

'JOB WILL BE THOROUGH'

To Bert Maloney, airport manager, she wrote:

"There's not a plane on the field that can reach me (and return) or do anything if they could—I'll be at sea, that's all, and you can count on me that the job will be thorough. I don't want any wreckage found."

She also told him:

"You must absolutely keep any of the men from doing any dangerous searching. Sorry to have to have it that way, but it's better than having an aviation 'accident.'"

FAMILY SILENT

Her family—she was the daughter of Col. and Mrs. Raymond C. Turck—was silent and did not disclose the contents of notes she left to them. In the note to the airport manager, the young woman had requested that there be no "sentimentalism."

She held a private pilot's license, although she was slightly crippled from infantile paralysis. Both she and her late husband were flying enthusiasts and Yonge said she was a "very, very good little flier," with about 100 hours of solo flying to her credit and had been taught aerial acrobatics.

Maloney and Yonge were of the opinion she headed the plane due eastward across the sea, pushed it hard until the fuel failed and then sent it into a spin for the final plunge. Knowing her well, they said they believed she had done just what she said she planned.

NURSE ACCUSED OF JEALOUSY

SANTA CRUZ, Cal., Nov. 22.—(AP)—Jealousy was blamed by the prosecutor for the shooting of Francis J. M. Grace as the state sought the death penalty today for his 43-year-old former nurse, Miss Freida Weltz.

In his closing arguments District Attorney J. Frank Murphy told the jury Miss Wentz became so maddened by jealousy at being displaced by other nurses that she shot the shipping family member September 9 in the yard of his Santa Cruz home.

The prosecutor assailed the defense story that the nurse had been drugged and attacked by Grace as a deliberate attempt to win the sympathy of the jury. Murphy said:

"It is a vicious attempt to dishonor the name of a man in his grave who cannot come here and defend himself. The entire story is vicious and uncorroborated."

Murphy was expected to complete his arguments today, after which Defense Attorney John Duggan, Jr., of Pittsburgh, was to address the jury. Duggan said his arguments would require only about 40 minutes.

15 MILES UP NOW GOAL OF SETTLE

Flier Says Balloon Could Attain Height Of 75,000 Feet

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—A prediction that man in the future will be able to penetrate as much as 15 miles into the stratosphere even with the present knowledge of ballooning was made today by Lieut. Com. T. G. W. Settle, who, with Maj. Chester L. Fordney, has ascended higher than any other American.

Settle called at the Navy Department to tell the story of his trip into the upper reaches to secretary Swanson, and expressed himself as fully ready "to try it again." He told newpapermen:

"Even with the present stage of the art of building balloons it would be possible to construct one several times the size of that in which the present flight was made."

75,000 FEET GOAL

Although reluctant to discuss prospective heights Settle said he believed 75,000 feet could be reached with a balloon of sufficient volume.

While the balloonst talked, experts at the Bureau of Standards here were busy calibrating his barometer to determine just how high a ceiling had been reached in his recent effort.

Studies of the atmosphere during Settle's flight showed that temperatures dropped rapidly to a point approximately 67 degrees below Farenheit as he ascended but then remained constant even to the peak of the flight.

BALLOON IN MARSH

BRIDGETON, N. J., Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Lieut. Com. T. G. W. Settle and Maj. Chester L. Fordney, who descended on this community from 59,000 feet in the blue, have departed but they have left behind a problem—a one-ton silk balloon far out in treacherous tidal marshes.

Farmers who cut salt hay and gunners who go duck hunting planned to retrieve the deflated bag.

If a tractor especially equipped for sodden ground cannot remove it at low tide, a boat will be tried at high tide.

The gondola, of light magnesium alloy, was dragged out of the marshes with ropes yesterday and taken to the Philadelphia Navy Yard.

DORIS DUKE 21, RICHEST GIRL

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Doris Duke, who became today the wealthiest girl in the world, is spending her 21st birthday "just like any other day."

She is even having a party—this daughter of the late James B. Duke, who left her a $53,000,000 tobacco and water power fortune.

The fact that she now has control of her fortune probably will not be mentioned at the great stone house off Central Park where she was born.

Doris' tastes are simple. She likes conservative dress, and doesn't care for jewels. She likes Europe because people a.e 't always seeking her out there.

TWO MEN HELD, BRIDES' BLISS WRECKED

Husbands Face Jail On Bogus Check, Theft Charges

Two brides found wedded bliss wrecked today, their husbands held for court, one on 42 charges involving larceny, bad checks and forgery and the other on 30 charges of entering buildings and of larceny.

The bridegrooms, both arraigned in Central Police Court this morning, admitted, according to police, their shortcomings, but blamed it on their desire to provide for their wives. Neither of the wives knew of the husband's alleged life of crime.

STANDS BY MATE

Harry Swiger, 34, of 315 Kaercher street, faced 42 witnesses who appeared to testify against him. They told of cashing his checks, presented at the time of making purchases—for the most part household furnishings. The total value involved, according to police, is approximately $500.

In a police cell, awaiting arraignment, Swiger had previously attempted suicide. His wife, the former Anna Mae Hackett, declared she would stick by him.

FACES THEFT CHARGES

Margaret Mechem Van Berkle, 18-year-old bride of 10 days, had a second shock today when, her husband, Leonard Van Berkle, 23, of 510 Sandusky street, faced 30 more charges of entering buildings and larceny. He was held for court yesterday on a number of similar charges, having been accused of robbing the offices of dentists and physicians. More than $1,000 in gold stolen from dentists' offices throughout the city has been recovered from pawn shops, according to detectives.

Mrs. Van Berkle, wed in an elopement following a four-day courtship, did not know of her husband's alleged criminal activities, according to police, until it was revealed yesterday in North Side Police Court.

CANDY POISONS ILL VETERANS

COATESVILLE, Pa., Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Department of Justice officials today revealed they are investigating a poison candy plot at the United States Veterans Hospital.

Three patients, a nurse and two hospital attendants were made ill Saturday by eating candy mailed in a small box in Philadelphia last Friday. All are on the way to recovery.

A small package of fudge containing alleged poison, it was declared, was opened by a war veteran patient in the presence of a nurse. The patient treated the nurse, two other patients and two attendants. Within a short time the six became violently ill and medical aid was summoned.

Gen. Hines, administrator of the Veteran Bureau, Washington, was notified and assigned investigators. They were joined by R. George Harvey, Justice Department agent, from Philadelphia.

The low that was centered over Alberta yesterday morning is now over Iowa, and another center appears over Alberta. The low that was centered over Lake Superior, and produced the rainy condition over this section yesterday and last night, is now far down the St. Lawrence Valley. High pressure continues over the plateau section, attended by clear skies as far east as the central plains. There is no cold weather indicated for the next several days.

TROOPERS HERD PEN RIOT MOB

International News Service.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.—Augmenting the regular force of guards, state police armed with tear gas bombs and sawed-off shotguns transformed Eastern Penitentiary into an armed camp today after convicts staged the most destructive riot in the 100-year-old history of the institution.

Clubs and torches in the hands of a mob of 75 desperate longtermers made a shambles out of the dye shop and weaving room and damaged the kitchen and chaplain's quarters. Loss was estimated at about $20,000.

For more than two hours yesterday the band of 75 prisoners defied the efforts of guards and almost 200 city policemen to drive them into their cells. Shots were fired, but no one was reported wounded.

The ringleaders were placed in an unused cell block under heavy guard last night and deprived of their dinners. Warden Herbert J. (Hard-Boiled) Smith said they will be punished further.

Warden Smith said the cause of the riot, the second in the past 72 hours and the fourth major outbreak in six weeks, was a mystery to him.

Woman Mayor Sees Nudity on Increase

BRIGHTON, England, Nov. 22.—(INS.)—Ten years from now, nudity will be "commonplace" at this famous seaside resort, according to Miss Margaret Hardy, Brighton's first woman Mayor.

In addition, Mayoress Hardy declared, 1943 will see four-hour working days and "virtually nonstop holidays" for the public—with attendant profits to Brighton, a popular sea coast resort.

PLAYBOY'S RUM BILLS BARED IN COURT

Clash Over McCready's Mentality Continues In Trust Suit

The strange case of Harrison R. (Playboy) McCready, whose own attorney is trying to prove him mentally deficient and his opposing counsel trying to prove him sane, continued today—the third day.

Attorney Charles J. Margiotti, representing the playboy in his suit to upset the $150,000 trust fund bestowed on his first wife and child, this morning suggested that a suit case full of cancelled checks, if examined one by one, would take until Thanksgiving.

Attorney Oliver K. Eaton, representing Mrs. Margaret McCready Welfer and Margaret Luella McCready, declared they would be brought before the court if it took until next January.

BILLS AIRED

McCready's bills came before the court, with Raymond B. Worley, grantee of McCready's property and a cousin, explaining the playboy had many of them.

Worley was asked by Judge F. P. Patterson if McCready knew that he was deeding a Penn avenue property to his second wife, Margaret Heasley McCready, Judge Patterson saying:

"Did McCready know he was conveying the property to his wife when he signed the deed and did he know what he was doing?"

"Well, that is not the mind of a child, who could not know what an instrument of that kind is."

Worley testified he refused to pay a $63 liquor bill submitted by a M. B. Pressman, in Grantsville, Md., and refused to pay other liquor bills because of their nature.

Eaton asked Worley what McCready thought of the $200 rental he is now getting from a Fox Chapel home built at a cost exceeding $125,000. Worley replied that McCready thought it was not high enough.

Eaton then commented:

"And you are the same Worley who asked a guardian for him?"

Worley said he was.

WIVES IN COURT

He later stated McCready was embarrassed about owing people in the city.

McCready sat glumly in the court room, listening to the testimony. Wife No. 1 was two seats in front and wife No. 2 two seats behind him. All were smartly dressed. They didn't speak.

Worley said yesterday that McCready's one-time $750,000 estate now amounts to about $125,000, chiefly in real estate, and that he has only the $200 a month rental money from his Fox Chapel mansion for his support and maintenance.

14 DIE IN RUSS PLANE CRASH

MOSCOW, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—A dispatch from Kharkov said the newly-constructed airplane K-7, said to be the largest airplane for overland flying in the world, crashed there yesterday killing 14 persons.

The dead were reported to include the chief pilot and mechanic and several Kharkov aviation officials, but beyond these bare facts no details were given out.

This is the second major aviation disaster in the Soviet Union in the past few months.

On September 5 eight executives of the aviation industry were killed in a plane crash at Podolsk. Among the dead were three of Russia's leading aviation figures.

The great airplane was designed to carry 128 persons, including its crew. It was designed with sleeping accommodations for 64 persons, divided into 16 cabins containing four berths each.

The mammoth plane was built in seven months entirely with Russian materials and by Russian labor.

It was commissioned only last week. Joseph Stalin and other leading figures in the Soviet Union called the plane the pride of the Soviet air fleet.

Lily Pons Cancels Concerts to Rest

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Lily Pons, the soprano, was ordered to bed for a complete rest by her physician today when she returned from a tour of the Middle and Far West. She was described as suffering from "a touch of bronchitis" contracted on tour.

The singer cancelled engagements in Wellesley, Mass., South Norwalk, Conn., and Washington.

John Lillec, 60, of Munhall Junction, collapsed today while visiting at the home of Mrs. Vincent Savulouis, 236 East Fourteenth street, Homestead, and was pronounced dead when taken to Homestead Hospital, according to a police report.

While police list the dead man as Lillec, Mrs. Savulouis said his right name was Leon Lelaikis.

NRA ASKS PITS TO HELP BRACE COAL PRICES

Owners of the truck coal mines of Western Pennsylvania have been asked to select representatives in their various districts to attend a meeting tomorrow to discuss methods of enforcing the minimum coal prices set up under NRA.

There have been reports of truck mines under-cutting the minimums previously set for the large rail mines.

PRICES APPROVED

The code authority of Western Pennsylvania has notified more than 1,000 owners of truck mines that a price list for their mines has now been approved by the NRA administrator in Washington and that violations will be punished. The prices for the truck mines are now the same as those scheduled for the rail mines.

Under the code, a new list of prices for both rail and truck mines will be set up by the code authority and approved by Washington on the first of each month.

ISSUES CALL

A letter signed by Charles F. Hosford, Jr., chairman of the administrative committee under the code authority, says to each truck mine owner:

"As a patriotic citizen, it is your duty to assist in carrying out the plans and purposes of the NRA. As a coal producer, you are afforded an opportunity to restore your business to a sound economic basis. The code authority therefore requests your prompt and hearty co-operation."

Coal prices are set up in various districts according to the quality of the coal as proved by analysis. The meeting tomorrow will be held at 10:30 a. m. at 803 Farmers Bank Building.

OIL MAN'S AIDE ON COAL BOARD

Walter A. Jones, confidential secretary to M. L. Benedum, Pittsburgh oil man, has been appointed presidential member of the subdivisional coal code authority for the Pittsburgh district.

The appointment was made by President Roosevelt. It came as a surprise to coal men here, who were expecting the appointment of a man from the coal industry.

The code authorities, with the aid of presidential appointees, set up minimum price lists.

Other presidential appointees in the subdivisions near this territory were: George Anderson, of New York; Benedict Crowell, of Cleveland; George B. Hadesty, of Fairmont, W. Va.; Frank L. Poindexter, of Cincinnati, and Fred K. Prosser, of Bluefield, W. Va.

John M. Carmody and F. P. Hanaway, of Pittsburgh, were named members of the divisional labor board.

SCOTTSBORO RULING NEAR

DECATUR, Ala., Nov. 22.—(AP.)—One remaining defense effort to halt the scheduled retrial next week of the seven Negro defendants in the "Scottsboro case" will be disposed of at a hearing here tomorrow.

Judge W. W. Callahan will decide then on a motion to quash the venire drawn for the third trial of Heywood Patterson, one of the defendants charged with attacking two white women aboard a freight train in Jackson County, Ala., on March 25, 1931.

A decision on the motion, based on the grounds that no Negroes were on the venire drawn for the trial, was deferred yesterday after Judge Callahan overruled a defense plea for a change of venue. The transfer was sought on a charge that a fair and impartial trial could not be had here.

Man Held for Theft Many Coats Found

Albert Goines, 22, Negro, was held for court in Central Police Court by Magistrate Leo Rothenberg today, on 26 charges of larceny in connection with the thefts of overcoats from restaurants, hotels, barber shops and office buildings. Out of 30 men who appeared against Goines, 26 identified their coats from among 40 recovered from pawn shops of the city.

Pittsburgh Gets Ripley, Ohio Laments Leaving

Cleveland Throngs Plead for Holdover

Preparations are being made to entertain capacity throngs attending Ripley's "Believe It Or Not Odditorium" here next week during the presentation by the Sun-Telegraph of Chicago's A Century of Progress feature attraction.

Two experiences foretold the necessity for preparation. More than 1,500,000 people saw the colossal collection of oddities and curiosities at the World's Fair. Cleveland attendance of the presentation of this feature during this week has reached such enormous proportions that the Ohio city sponsors wanted it continued next week.

Efforts along this line, however, were futile. The Sun-Telegraph already had prepared for the presentation here beginning next Monday. "The show must go on," and so the formal opening has been set for 7 o'clock next Monday evening. The place will be the spacious former Campbell Department Store at 333 Fifth avenue, which extends a whole city block through to Oliver avenue.

INTERESTED MILLIONS

The entire show which interested millions at the Century of Progress will be presented here. And in addition there will be added features that have been since unearthed by Ripley in his quest for unusual things to all corners of the world. Before the spectators' eyes will be 25 human oddities and 300 inanimate curiosities.

Then there will be 200 free tickets given away to observing readers of the Sun-Telegraph, which features Ripley's cartoon, both daily and Sunday.

Read this daily feature . . . see what constitutes Ripley's amazing oddities and then look about you. Right in your own neighborhood, but of a certainty in the tri-state district, are many curious facts. Hunt them out—send them in—addressed to the Ripley Contest Editor, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

FREE TICKET OFFER

One hundred tickets will be given to the adults sending in the most interesting items (they must be bonafide facts) and 100 more tickets will be given to children sending in the best curiosities. See the notice elsewhere on this page for full directions.

This entertaining . . . not to overlook the educational value . . . "Odditorium" will be available to adults at the small admission cost of 40 cents—children 15 cents. The Sun-Telegraph's share of proceeds will go to Christmas charity. Following its opening the show will continue daily the remainder of the week from 11:45 a. m., except Thanksgiving Day and Saturday, when the doors will open at 10 a. m.

That school children can have every opportunity to see this interesting exhibition, a special admission price of 10 cents has been set for Thanksgiving and Saturday between 10 a. m. and noon.

Sign Painters Will Meet on NRA Code

The Pittsburgh Sign Contractors' Association will meet tomorrow night in the Fulton Building to consider the new NRA sign code. A talk will be given by John B. Dewar, code chairman for the Master Painters and Decorators.

Here's Your Chance

Boys and girls—men and women!

TWO HUNDRED TICKETS ARE TO BE GIVEN AWAY to the Sun-Telegraph readers who send in the strangest facts.

Just send your entries addressed to "Ripley Contest," Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. All entries must be received before midnight, November 27.

One hundred tickets will go to the children. Another hundred will go to the grown-ups.

WORKERS' MEET AT WEIRTON

A report of a delegation which carried complaints against officials to the regional labor board in Pittsburgh, will be made at a mass meeeting of workers of the Weirton Steel Company in Weirton, W. Va., tonight.

It was charged when representatives of the men met with the regional board that officials of the company were not living up to terms of the agreement under which the recent steel strike was settled. It was also charged that men were being dismissed because they belonged to the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers.

'Hot Ice' Maker Gets Science Prize

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Dr. Percy W. Bridgman, Harvard scientist, who made hot ice, last night was given the Comstock prize, awarded every five years by the National Academy of Sciences for outstanding scientific achievement.

Dr. Bridgman is famous for experiments with high pressures, under which ordinary substances behave in strange fashions. He has turned hot water into ice water that is hot and hard.

BULLETS FIRED IN MEAT STRIKE

SUSPECTS NAMED

At the Forty-third Street Police Station, where they were charged with being suspicious persons, they said they were Lawrence Eckhart, 22, of Ley street; Elmer Mann, 24, of 1714 Emmanuel street; James Yaglicha, 21, of 1138 Voskamp street; Frank Gerstberger, 21, of 138 Voskamp street, Millvale; Charles Sturn, 22, of 1620 Lowrie street; Romane Deutsch, 19, of 2 Arcola street, and Matthew Markuss, 19, of 1311 Gerst way.

Several hours earlier windows in meat markets in the North Side, the Strip and East Liberty districts were stoned by alleged strike sympathizers cruising the district in automobiles.

Almost simultaneously five false alarms of fire were sounded in the Woods Run district, the effort being to draw police attention away from packing plants, according to police.

WINDOWS SMASHED

Four were arrested in connection with the bombarding of windows.

Harry Zollder, 20, of 2 Arcola street, was arrested in Spring Garden avenue. Police said they found half a brick in his automobile. Forty-third street police arrested three others at the request of North Side police. They are Frank Donia, 19, of 3343 Spring Garden avenue; Joseph Berkey, 22, of 3509 Leach street, and Steve Kulakowski, 22, of 159 Thirty-eighth street.

Among the places stoned and windows shattered were Vogel Brothers' Meat Market, 20 East Lacock street; E. E. Miller Meat Market, 1701 Lowrie street, and National Meat Market, 735 East Ohio street on the North Side.

Five windows were shattered in the East Liberty district. The places were the P. H. Butler store, at 112 Paulson avenue; Klose Brothers Meat Market, 5504 Frankstown avenue; St. Clair Meat Market, 5705-07 Penn avenue; Hamilton Meat Market, 5405 Frankstown avenue, and the H. Bissell and Sons market, at 6492 Frankstown avenue.

Dies in Quarantine Church Rites Held Over Radio

WILLIAMSPORT, Pa., Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Quarantine regulations were overcome by radio to give 17-year-old Jean Petters, victim of infantile paralysis, a church funeral service.

While her parents sat in their Montgomery home, 10 miles away, alone with the girl's body yesterday, funeral services came to them from the Evangelical Lutheran Church from which the sermon of the Rev. A. Klepfer was broadcast from a Williamsport station.

The girl, stricken a week ago, died Monday. Her brother and 10 other persons, some of whom had visited her, also are under quarantine.

SUIT OF DIVER THROWN OUT

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Federal Judge Alfred C. Coxe has dismissed the suit of Art Jeffers, Pittsburgh diver, who sought damages for injuries suffered in a blast of dynamite under the Ohio River. The judge yesterday ruled his court had no jurisdiction in the case.

Attorneys for the defendant, the Foundation Company of New York, convinced the court the suit did not come under the maritime law and that there was no cause for action in Federal Court.

Jeffers was crippled and almost blinded while helping build the West End Bridge across the Ohio River in 1930. He blamed a premature blast of dynamite.

"After thorough consideration of the facts, I am convinced that this is a purely local question for the state compensation laws of Pennsylvania."

Siam Lifts Martial Law After Rebellion

BANGKOK, Siam, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—The Siamese government lifted today the state martial law proclaimed at the beginning of the October rebellion which was not put down until after revolutionary forces had advanced within a few miles of the capital.

A special military court began trying persons arrested in connection with the uprising. Indications that country-wide peace soon would be prevailing were provided in the fact that elections in Siam's first people's assembly were proceeding calmly in the provinces.

7,000 MINERS GO TO 'POLLS' IN REGION

office building; Allegheny Coal & Coke Company, Allegheny, superintendent's office building; Republic Iron & Steel Company, Russellton, company's old boiler house; Inland Colleries Company, Indianola, hall over company store; Consumers Mining Company, Harmarville, company's emergency hospital; National Mining Company, National No. 1, school house; National No. 3, community building; Vesta Coal Company, Vesta No. 4, (A) Richieville camp building; (B) Daisytown fan house; Vesta No. 5, barracks building; Vesta No. 6, barracks building; Picklands-Mather Company, Mather, company polling place; Crucible Fuel Company, Crucible, company movie building; Weirton Steel Company, Isabella, community hall.

Tomorrow, elections will be held at 15 mines in the Connellsville coke region.

Supervisors have been assigned to every mine in the district by the National Labor Board. The federal men will hand out ballots upon which the nominees previously chosen by the miners appear.

UNION MEN NAMED

United Mine Workers have nominated three international and three district officers. Their names and affiliations appear on the ballots. At practically all of the United States Steel Corporation's mines in the district—the National Mining Company and the H. C. Frick Coke Company—the so-called company unions, or brotherhoods, have nominated "independent" candidates

Dr. William M. Leiserson, secretary of the National Labor Board, will maintain headquarters in Brownsville throughout the two-day election. Jesse I. Miller, assistant to the chairman of the board, will remain at the William Penn Hotel here.

Fifteen supervisors will be in the field today and tomorrow. One man will be stationed at each mine. Their duties will be to assist miners in marking their ballots and to preside over the elections, settling all questions of dispute arising out of the privileges accorded to the miners in the presidential agreement.

DISPUTE OVER ISSUE

While the captive mine operators as a group have announced that the election will not determine the union issue, an opposite view is taken by union officials.

Philip Murray, international vice president of the United Mine Workers of America, has indicated he will attempt to negotiate contracts with those operators whose employes vote for union officials as representatives.

As far as the miners are concerned, their attitude will be determined by the vote. Both majority and "substantial minority" groups are entitled to recognition under the presidential agreement.

Students to Aid Chamber in Fete

The Chamber of Commerce will hold a family party and entertainment on Monday evening. The program will include a dinner, a play by Carnegie Tech drama students, and music by the Chamber of Commerce chorus.

BLAST AROUSES FRICK MINERS

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Nov. 22.—The H. C. Frick Coke Company's Colonial mines were in an uproar early today following a bomb blast scare at the home of Alex Jones, a miner of Smock. The blast occurred a few minutes after a Brotherhood celebration, which broke up about 2 a. m., according to state police.

Windows in the vicinity were shattered and a hole was torn in the ground, but no serious damage resulted. Jones told police he found five unexploded sticks of dynamite underneath a rose bush in his front yard several days ago.

ACE-SHOWING BIDS UPHELD

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Ace-showing bids in contract bridge were upheld today by the Whist Club of New York in a decision at variance with a recent ruling by the Portland Club, of London.

The Whist Club's committee on laws, of which Harold S. Vanderbilt is chairman, answered a question submitted by Frank E. Bourget, of Chicago, by saying that a specific card shown by a bid is not exposed, because such was not the intent of the framers of the international code, which authorizes the use of conventions designed to convey an arbitrary or artificial meaning.

The ruling by the Portland Club came after the defeat of two British teams by an American quartet which Ely Culbertson captained last summer. It outlawed Culbertson's four and five no-trump conventions, which locate aces in slam bidding, and also ace-showing bids of other systems. It authorized opponents of the users of such conventions to demand new deals, the aces being construed as exposed during the auction.

American contract players never have recognized the Portland Club's ruling. The decision of the Whist Club presumably shows there will be difficulty in future revision of the international code and also in agreement on conditions for further international matches for a trophy presented by Charles M. Schwab.

FRANCE OPENS PEACE DOOR TO HITLER

PARIS, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—A government spokesman said today that the French door to peace is wide open to Chancellor Hitler of Germany, if he cares to enter carrying an olive branch.

This authoritative invitation was made as a comment on an interview with the German chief by Fernand de Brinon, a close friend of former Premier Edouard Daladier, published in the newspaper Le Matin.

The interview quoted Hitler as offering peace and security to France in return for equality for Germany.

SAAR PROBLEM

Le Matin said Hitler visualized the greatest obstacle to accord between France and Germany as the question of the Saar territory, now held by France. The French government spokesman said:

"The question is whether Chancellor Hitler will submit to the supervisions of the armaments we know he is building."

The spokesman rejected the idea of direct conversations between Premier Albert Sarraut and Chancellor Hitler, suggested several days ago in unofficial circles. He said:

"We are ready to talk through ambassadors, but we do not see that a meeting of Hitler and Sarraut could clear the atmosphere. Germany has a clean-cut program which needs military force to execute and she rapidly is getting this force.

"If Hitler does not want Alsace-Lorraine (as Le Matin stated), why is it included in this program?"

ARMS PARLEY DELAY

Geneva, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—The steering committee of the disarmament conferece voted today to suspend the parley until January.

Meantime, internation diplomacy is to be given full play in its efforts to save the disarmament conference from oblivion and to bring Germany, which withdrew last month from the negotiations back into the conversations.

NEW DISORDERS SWEEP CUBA

HAVANA, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—New disorders in the interior developed last night and early today as rumors that the threatened revolution was near, circulated in a tense and strife-weary capital.

Seven bombs exploded in Camaguey Province during the night. One man was gravely wounded. Considerable property damage was reported.

Manzanillo Port strikers, in an ugly mood, fired on vessels in the harbor; but there were no casualties.

Col. Fulgencio Batista continued his extraordinary preparations for any emergency. Army planes went aloft early this morning. A guard of four soldiers and a sailor was stationed at the United States embassy. Soldiers remained at their posts around and on the roof of the palace.

FEUD OF MOVIE STARS ENDED

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—The finale to the Hollywood feud between John Warburton, Alice White and Sydney Bartlett came yesterday when a jury acquitted Martin Block and Russell Brown of robbery charges.

Block and Brown had been accused of holding up Warburton some weeks ago but they told a story of being hired by Bartlett to beat up the actor because of his alleged conduct toward Miss White.

At a subsequent grand jury investigation Miss White testified the asserted stories of a plot to disfigure Warburton were ridiculous but she did relate the actor once had struck her. Bartlett, a writer, declined to testify.

Cost County $100 To 'Knock Out' Buffaloes

It cost Allegheny County $100 to "gas" the buffaloes in the county parks recently, when veterinarians inoculated the animals, the County Commissioners were informed today.

Ray Sprigle, director of property and suplies, said that he "borrowed" 10 gas bombs from Sheriff Frank I. Gollmar and used them as anesthetics for the buffaloes, believing that the bombs were "very cheap."

Yesterday, however, he informed the Commissioners that the Sheriff wanted him to return or pay for the bombs and then learned that the "sleep producers" cost $10 each.

BAKER DEFENDS ENGINEERS

The engineering profession should not be blamed for the present economic difficulties, in the opinion of Dr. Thomas S. Baker, president of the Carnegie Institute of Technology.

In making his annual report today, Dr. Baker defended engineers against their many critics. He said:

"During the depression it has been customary to disparage engineering, to blame technology for many of the economic difficulties, and to prophesy for the engineer a less important role than he has played in the past.

"The first intimations of industrial recovery seem to show that modern business is inextricably mixed up with technology and that the technologists will, as far as we can see, continue to guide industrial progress."

RUSSIAN DEBTS FACING DELAY

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Maxim Litvinoff apparently will return home prior to final settlement of Russo-American debts and claims.

Such a development, officials hasten to explain, would indicate no serious obstacle to a satisfactory understanding but would result rather from the mass of material needing study.

An important factor in completing the job is the heavy press of new Treasury duties which have kept Acting Secretary Henry Morgenthau, Jr., from devoting more time to the Russian question. The debts and claims were put in Morgenthau's hands by President Roosevelt.

The Soviet commissar now plans to leave Washington late tomorrow or Friday and sail from New York Saturday.

BANK TO REOPEN AT BRENTWOOD

The plan for reorganization of the Brentwood State Bank has been approved by 75 per cent of the stockholders, according to John K. Blair, cashier.

Considerable progress has been made in the sale of stock in the new institution, which, when opened, will free 100 per cent of all deposits, Blair stated.

The stock being sold comprises 5,000 shares at $15.50 per share. Offices at the bank are being kept open from 7:30 p. m. and 9 p. m. for conferences with stockholders, depositors and citizens.

Government Crisis Threatens in Japan

TOKIO, Nov. 22.—(INS.)—A government crisis, threatening the downfall of Premier Makoto Saito's cabinet, developed today over the refusal of Finance Minister Korekiyo Takahashi to approve increased armament expenditures in the new budget.

Creating an uproar in government circles, Takahashi took a flat stand denying the request of the navy, tantamount to a demand, for an additional appropriation of 130,000,000 yen (approximately $40,3000,000) and that of the army for an extra expenditure of 100,000,000 yen proximately $40,300,000) and (approximately $31,000,000.)

Uniontown Priest Buried in Pittsburgh

UNIONTOWN, Pa., Nov. 22.—Funeral services were held here this morning for the Rev. Father B. P. Kenna, for 40 years pastor of St. John's Roman Catholic Church. A nephew, the Rev. Father Edgar Kenna, of Baltimore, was celebrant of the mass and another nephew, the Rev. Father William Kenna, of Pittsburgh, was sub diacon. Bishop Hugh C. Boyle administered last blessings. Burial was in Calvary Cemetery, Pittsburgh.

Thief Discards Coat Because It Didn't Fit

When W. A. McClintock, of 216 Mulford street, went to Central Police Station to report the theft of his overcoat from his auto, parked at Oliver avenue and Smithfield street, he was handed his coat.

It had been brought into the station a short time before by E. Morelles, of 4827 Broad street, who said he had found it in his machine, parked at Fourth avenue and Wood street.

Fire Routs 1,500 In Show Audience

FALL RIVER, Mass., Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Fire swept through the Academy of Music Building, in the center of Fall River, last night, forcing evacuation of 1,500 persons watching a moving picture and vaudeville show, and causing damage estimated by fire officials at $100,000.

The fire was discovered as a hot air explosion blew out several windows and shooting flames scorched automobiles parked by the curb.

CANCER DEATH DATA HELD MISLEADING

Life insurance tables which show a continuously rising cancer death rate paint an exaggerated picture of cancer danger, according to Dr. Lester Hollander, medical director of the Pittsburgh Skin and Cancer Foundation.

A recent survey by a large life insurance company indicates an increase in cancer deaths of 5 per cent in 1932 over 1930, the highest rise since 1920.

BETTER RECORDS KEPT

Dr. Hollander attributes this apparent increase to the longer average life of the population and to better kept records and diagnosis of cancer cases.

In the main, he points out, cancer is a disease of middle and old age. Recent English observations, he says, seem to prove that animals also suffer from cancer, often dying from it in their old age. This and other evidence has led to the suspicion some authorities hold that one of the causes of cancer is old age itself.

URGES EXAMINATIONS

Cancer, Dr. Hollander points out, is the only disease known to man that doesn't cure itself. Unless its progress is arrested by physicians using either surgery, X-rays, or radium, death is inevitable. He says:

"There is no miracle cure of cancer; there never was, and there never will be. Cancer in humans is like a rotten spot in an apple. Unless it is removed, it will spread through the whole fruit."

Since many other diseases, such as neuritis, can produce symptoms of cancer, Dr. Hollander sees a periodical health examination by the family physician with an eye alert for cancer as the best insurance against it.

LAUDS HOSPITALS

Caught in time, he says, most types of cancer can be cured, but every day of delay makes a cure more difficult. After development of the first suspicious sign, he explains, each week that passes before treatment is begun lessens the chance of recovery by about 8 per cent.

Cures are available in a dozen Pittsburgh hospitals, according to Dr. Hollander. He says:

"Pittsburgh is very fortunate that it has so many well run hospitals staffed by such excellent medical men. Practically all hospitals here have their own pathologist to make a microscopic analysis for cancer tissue, the only sure diagnostic test."

COUNTERFEITER SUSPECT HELD

Thomas Montgomery was convicted yesterday in Federal Court on a counterfeiting charge in connection with the passing of a $1 bill on Charles Walker, a barber. He is also said to have possessed two other fake bills taken from him in the police patrol.

Montgomery and three companions were arrested in the Hill district August 3. Police said they found two suspicious notes, and also a pair of loaded dice on the men.

The bills were the same kind as had been offered Walker. Federal men say Montgomery attempted to get rid of the two notes in the patrol.

COLDS

Go Overnight

When You Take The Right Thing!

A cold doesn't have to run its course and expose you to serious complications. A cold can be routed overnight if you go about it the right way. First of all, a cold being an internal infection, calls for internal treatment. Secondly, a cold calls for a COLD remedy and not for a "cure-all."

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine is what a cold requires. It is expressly a cold remedy. It is internal and direct—and it does the four things necessary. It opens the bowels, combats the cold germs and fever in the system, relieves the headache and grippy feeling and tones and fortifies the entire system. Anything less than that is taking chances with a cold. Get Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine at any druggist, 30c and 50c. Ask for it by the full name and beware of dealers who offer substitutes.

MENUS CAN SUIT TEMPERATURES

Prudence Penny Food Hints Give Wide Variety

Since Pittsburgh weather is as variable as the winds, why not, Prudence Penny queries, make your menus adaptable to the temperature?

When spring lingers in the air, as it has the last few days, take advantage of the balmy weather to brighten up your meals with foods that suit the day. And, just as an extra touch, place a sprig of parsley on your meat, a rose button radish on your salad, and, presto, the most ordinary dish will be transformed.

If the weather changes overnight as it is apt to do, consult Prudence Penny and her prize recipes to find just the ones you want. By giving you a daily variety, her recipes answer the needs of all occasions and temperatures.

With letters coming in by the hundreds, Prudence Penny, however much she would like to, cannot possibly return recipes sent in to her. She asks housewives to consider this and asks them, if they want the written forms, to make personal copies of each recipe they send in.

One prize of $5 and 10 prizes of $1 are still being awarded to the 11 best recipes received, so why not enter your favorites by mailing them to Prudence Penny, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph and give them a chance to become prize winners.

Correct Manners

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Who Speaks First?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have read your column with much pleasure and hope you can enlighten me further.

1—When a boy and girl encounter each other on the street, who should say "Hello" first?

2—If you notice, I have started my letter with "I." Is this correct? READER.

1—It is the woman who is given the privilege of bowing or speaking first to a man when they meet. The man waits for this acknowledgment of their acquaintanceship.

2—Yes, it is quite correct to begin a letter with "I." Formerly there was a Victorian rule, or at least suggestion, against this, but to me there never did seem to be much sense in this suggestion. Often, too, I noticed that in trying to avoid beginning the letter with I, a very awkward beginning resulted. Your beginning was very natural, chatty and written as one might begin a conversation.

Who Pays?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a constant reader of your very helpful column and I wonder if you really realize what a help you are? Up to this time I have not had to write you, but as I cannot reach a decision, I am asking your help.

If a girl invites a boy to an affair, a prom for instance, and he offers to pay her for the bid, is it correct for her to accept or not? My friends do not agree on the subject so I am writing to you because I think you are the most capable person to answer this question. E.

The girl, who is the hostess, should take it for granted that as hostess, she is to buy the tickets for the prom. And the boy who is invited by her also takes this courtesy for granted, and shouldn't even mention it, except to thank her for her kind invitation. That is, he shouldn't mention the price for the tickets, or the fact that she paid for them.

Don't 'Promote' Showers

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a young married woman and I have a sister who is going to be married soon. I would like to entertain for her in some way. Is it proper for me to give her a bridge shower or just a bridge? Some of my friends say that it doesn't look nice to give a bridge shower . . . that a plain bridge is more suitable for a sister to use as an entertainment. WONDERING.

You have very wise friends who have the correct social point of view about this . . . the point of view that it is not in good taste for a close relative of the bride-to-be or of the groom-to-be to give a shower for the bride-to-be. Then the shower appears more as a "promotion." If a group of the bride-to-be's close friends plan a shower for her, it is a charming gesture; if a sister "promotes" a shower, it is obviously, quite another matter.

LIQUOR STORES VOTE DUE IN HOUSE

$1,000 and a minimum of $5,000 for distilleries. The measures come up for first reading today.

The permit bill was amended to make the winery fee $250 instead of the present $100 and the proposed $1,000.

The issue in the control fight is sharply and distinctly defined—is bottled liquor to be sold through Gov. Gifford Pinchot's state stores or by private package retailers, and it is on this front that today's battle will be re-enacted.

Commenting on yesterday's action by the House on the McClure bill, Gov. Pinchot today said:

"I am very much gratified to see the state stores plan so emphatically indorsed."

BOARD TO BE NAMED

He said he will name today the three persons who will serve on the state liquor control board which the bill sets up to supervise state stores and issue licenses to hotel, restaurants and clubs eligible to sell liquor for drinking on the spot.

Representatives Clinton A. Sowers, Philadelphia, and Joseph G. Steedle, Allegheny, teamed up as leaders of the "cities bloc" waging war on the state stores plan, brought the issue to a head in their attempt to put their package stores and district control plan into the bill.

Adoption of the compromise amendments agreed upon by Gov. Pinchot and Republican organization leaders was the issue upon which the test came, with Sowers insisting that a vote for the amendments was a vote for the state stores.

FIGHT TO RESUME

Beaten, Sowers prepared to make a last ditch fight again today by moving his amendments from the floor.

The accepted amendments, offered by the author of the bill, modified its provisions to permit hotels and restaurants to retail liquor from 7 a. m. until 2 a. m., eliminate sacramental wines from its scope, cut the requirements for hotels and restaurants to 10 bedrooms and 50 patrons respectively and set up other minor changes.

A bill was introduced by Senator Harry B. Scott, Centre, under the compromise agreement, setting up a three-member liquor control board to regulate the liquor business in place of the Alcohol Permit Board.

Members would be appointed for six years at a salary of $10,000 annually, with one term expiring every two years. The Governor would make the appointment, subject to confirmation by a two-thirds vote of all members of the Senate.

Senate Defers Action On Liquor Tax

HARRISBURG, Nov. 22.—Action on the Pinchot plan to impose a $2 tax on liquor manufactured in Pennsylvania before repeal was deferred in the Senate today while the Senate Finance Committee conferred with Attorney General William A. Schnader.

Schnader and the committee prepared to meet at once.

Distillers in the Pittsburgh district and Philadelphia were opposing the tax measure. Before the Senate decided to postpone action, Senator Henry L. Snyder, Lehigh, Democrat, charged Gov. Pinchot was trying to "dry up" the state by driving out the liquor industry.

On learning of threats of distillers to quit the state if the tax is imposed, Gov. Pnchot termed the announcements "grandstand play."

Schnader was to explain the provisions of the bill to the Finance Committee.

Senate committees report bills to set up a Pennsylvania liquor control commission of three members and to continue the tax of $1.24 a barrel on beer and other malt beverages after repeal.

SCHENLEY DISTILLERY SHUT

The Schenley distillery of the Joseph Finch Company, employing 1,200 persons, was closed down today because of objections to the $2-per-gallon floor tax and $1-per-gallon new distillation tax, as provided in Gov. Pinchot's liquor control bill, L. P. Weiner, superintendent of the plant announced.

Production in the company's distilleries "outside the state of Pennsylvania" will be increased, Weiner said, adding:

"The last batch of whisky was made and the last grain ground tonight at the Joseph Finch Company plant at Schenley."

Expansion of the plant, now about two-thirds complete, may be halted, it was reported.

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.—(INS.)—Apparently to escape the $2 a gallon floor tax on liquor slated to be enacted by the Legislature today, the Continental Distilling Company last night moved 50,000 cases of its newly manufactured gin across the Delaware River to Camden, N. J.

Witherow Frowns On Rum Board Job

William P. Witherow, a leader of the Citizens League, doesn't want a job on the liquor control board proposed by Gov. Pinchot.

Witherow denied a report from Harrisburg that he had been offered such an appointment. And, if it is offered, he said, he wouldn't accept, because:

"I'm too busy. I have other occupations."

WINE BOTTLES DENIED CAFES

Appeal to the United States Commissioner of Customs today failed to gain the release of several boxes of empty wine bottles at the Canadian border for use here by restaurant and hotel men for educational purposes.

Commissioner James H. Moley telegraphed refusal to A. Albert, maitre de hotel of the William Penn Hotel and president of the Pittsburgh Chapter, International Stewards and Caterers' Association. The decision considered the empty containers of Italian, French and German wines and rums as advertising banned under the prohibition act.

Albert said further attempts will be made to gain release of the shipment, gathered at the request of the local group by Johan Helders, maitre de hotel at Chateau Laurier, Ottawa. Albert pointed out many wine dealers are advertising in trade journals. The bottles were planned for use in a special lecture on proper care, handling and serving of wines.

Restaurant Men Send Liquor Plea

Ros L. Gammon, president of the Western Pennsylvania Restaurant Association, was in Harrisburg today carrying recommendations of the restaurant men to include in the McClure bill provision to grant permission to restaurant operators to sell liquor before noon and after midnight; restricting sales of liquor to restaurants with at least 1,000 square feet of space and fixing a smaller license fee for restaurants selling wine but not liquor.

LIQUOR STORES 'DEAL' PROBE RESUMES

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 22.—Faced with a welter of contradictory testimony obtained during a session marked by frequent verbal clashes, the House committee probing charges that Western Pennsylvania distillers were offered five-sixths of the state stores business "for a consideration," resumed its sessions today.

Representative Morton Witkin, Philadelphia, chairman of the committee, expected that names of two men who sought to "deal" with Harold Jacoby, president of Schenley Products Company and the name or telephone number of a Philadelphian who telephoned him with another "offer," would be available for the second day of the inquiry.

It also was possible the Philadelphia representative of the concern to whom a third alleged offer was made would be on hand to testify.

Jacoby and A. Leo Weil, counsel for Schenley whose revelation of the proposed "deals" resulted in the investigation, testified at the first hearing, with the distillery president accusing his attorney of "misunderstanding my story."

Jacoby's story of the incident to which Weil referred in testifying at the liquor tax hearing was that the man had asked for the exclusive Pennsylvania distribution rights, saying they "were in" with the proper authorities and could see that state stores bought "at least 80 per cent of their liquor from Schenley."

Weil, over Jacoby's denials, testified the men asked a financial consideration for the "favor" and insisted Schenley "go along" with the administration tax measures. Jacoby admitted he had forgotten the incident until last Sunday.

Bill Bars Girls In Restaurants Selling Liquor

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, Nov. 22.—The "service with a smile" one receives from favorite waitresses is likely to end in restaurants that propose to sell liquor after repeal.

Adoption of the McClure liquor control bill in its present form would prevent restaurants that sell alcoholic beverages from employing women in any capacity.

This means the supplanting of waitresses with male workers.

ADVANCE BANK TAX REPEALER

HARRISBURG, Nov. 22.—The Coyne bill repealing the four mills tax on interest-bearing bank deposits today was reported favorably to the Senate by the Finance Committee.

Sponsored by Senator James J. Coyne, of Pittsburgh, it would carry out the purpose the Legislature intended in an act of last session sponsored by Senator Morris Einstein, Allegheny.

The Einstein act relieved bank depositors of direct liability for payment of the four-mill tax. When, after its passage, it was discovered its effect was to make the banks responsible for the tax payment, Coyne sponsored a repealer of the Einstein act. That repealer was vetoed by the Governor because no substitute source of revenue had been provided for the $8,000,000 the bank deposit tax had been expected to produce.

The proposed revenue from liquor now is expected to yield the $8,000,000 in place of the bank tax.

U. S. COMPLETES CASE AGAINST M'CLURE

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—With a stinging denunciation of State Senator John J. McClure, the government today brought to a close the summation of its case in the Delaware County "protection" ring trial.

Judge George A. Welsh said the defense, which did not offer a witness, would present its summation later today and he would charge the federal jury tomorrow.

Chet A. Keyes, special assistant United States Attorney General, singled out McClure, Delaware County Republican leader, in condemning the 71 defendants.

DENOUNCES M'CLURE

Saying that he would have no chance for rebuttal, Keyes discussed the admitted law violations of some of his key witnesses, including D. Harvey Sykes and Samuel Scott, former constables, in an attempt to anticipate in defense arguments.

The prosecutor said:

"If Sykes was a rat, he was John J. McClure's rat. If Scott was a chiseler, he was John J. McClure's chiseler.

OATH VIOLATED

"Defense lawyers will tell you these men took an oath of office and violated that oath. But I am telling you that this State Senator took the same oath and it is just as wrong, in fact, many times worse, for a State Senator to violate that oath.

"People look up to a State Senator and expect something more than the head of a racket organization collecting tribute from bawdy houses, bootleggers and rum smugglers."

Keyes said John J. Ryan, Chester politician and alleged paymaster of the ring, "sat in his automobile on the dock in the dark of the moon and counted the cases of liquor as they were landed from the boats to make sure that John J. McClure would get his $1.50 a case."

GOLLMAR HOLDS LEAD IN RACE FOR SHERIFF

The battle over Sheriff was resumed today with Frank I. Gollmar still holding a comfortable lead and Democrats predicting gains for John Heinz.

Addition of official to unofficial figures gives Gollmar a 493-vote advantage.

By the official figures to date he still trails Heinz, but the gap is narrowing rapidly. The count for 553 districts so far canvassed by the Return Board is:

Heinz	118,059
Golmar	116,220

Democrats, however, expect to gain 137 votes at least if the "hijacked" Eighth District of the Seventh Ward is counted, 75 more when the recounted districts to date are read in, and 100 votes in a recheck on the Second Ward of Coraopolis.

Republicans yesterday filed two petitions for recount, and Democrats four, bringing the total to 50.

A decision which involves only seven votes, but may determine the next Burgess of Braddock was expected from recount judges today.

The contested votes are for James H. Rose, Republican Burgess, who has an unofficial lead of 10 over his Democratic opponent, Fred Seim. Rose's name was printed in two brackets on the ballots, appearing once with and once without the initial.

In seven ballots, discovered yesterday in the recount of the First District of the First Ward, Braddock, crosses were marked after Rose's name in each bracket. This voids the ballots, B. B. McGinnis, attorney for the Democrats, contended.

TELL IT TO ELSIE

Follow This Unusual Feature Day by Day

By ELSIE ROBINSON

Jobless Husband's Letter Answered by Woman

Are working wives of jobless husbands "poor sports"? Roger F. said they were. He was quite bitter against it. According to him, such ladies continually "rubbed it in" that they were buying the bacon.

My husband's name is not "Roger F.," but our circumstances are so nearly like those described by that worthy gentleman that I'd like to tell him a few things. I'll call this "The Poor Sport's Side of the Story"—and I hope he reads it. It may make him do some thinking.

First, let me tell you just why I kept on working after I was married. My first memories as a child were of a very comfortable home, and of a father who had a profitable position until he got sick. He had no money saved, and he was sick a long time. We descended from a pleasant life, to the verge of actual want.

So—lest such a thing happen in my own family—I resolved to work until we had some savings for a rainy day. But we hadn't been married long before my husband found himself without work, and my pay has been cut almost in half, and my work increased.

Taking a cheaper apartment meant moving farther from my work. There is no convenient car or bus service out our way, and we, like Roger F., sold our car. So I am walking seventeen blocks, morning and night.

Naturally I am very tired when I get home. I'll admit that I'm probably a little irritable. Tired people often are. But if my husband were his usual self, my peevishness would pass unnoticed. Since it takes two to make a quarrel, he must be a little guilty, too.

ACTS LIKE A CHILD

I know he has tramped many miles in search of work, and I know that at night he is tired, too. But why not act like a man about it, and not like a disgruntled child? I am not to blame for his misfortune, nor am I blaming him, so why take his spite out on me? Why should I spend my evenings consoling and cheering him, when perhaps I need a little encouragement myself?

We could occasionally ask a friend in for the evening. Our friends' circumstances have also declined, so we wouldn't need to do any elaborate entertaining. But Friend Husband says: "No. You just want them to come in so you can advertise our misfortunes." I never had such an idea. I thought it would cheer things up. Are the real pleasures of life only those that cost money? I don't think so.

Then there is another thing. My husband knows quite a lot about the work I'm doing, and often his advice has helped me. But now I dare not mention my work, or he accuses me of "rubbing it in." I couldn't even discuss—much less, go to—our office picnic this summer. Yet my husband knew about it. It had enough publicity in the papers. And I adore picnics. But when he meets any of his old crowd I am expected to be all agog with interest.

DENIED AFFECTION

I am not complaining about working. I don't miss the comforts and conveniences of our former life half as much as I miss the pleasant, loving companionship of my husband. I realize that with no work he feels badly, but why deny me the affection I crave?

I'll admit I'm sometimes cross—but maybe I'm not so much "rubbing it in" as just humanly paying him back for venting his spite on me. I endure his sulking because my home means everything to me, and I hope his loving ways will come back some day. But it is not easy.

So I think that it Roger F., John B. and my husband, and all the others similarly situated, will just think it over a little, they will realize that at least a few of the traits of Poor Sportsmanship are ingrained in the husbands of the wives who work.

"MRS. ROGER F. — Pro Tem."

So, there's the other side of the picture, boys! Think it over! It hurts your pride, and makes you feel useless and cantankerous, to have the Little Woman paying the grocery bills—but how do you make her feel?

Must you withhold everything because you can't hand over a pay check? Wouldn't she chirp up and give you a better break if you forgot yourself once in a while, gave her a big kiss, and told her she was a Grand Girl?

Nude Beautiful in Art Only When Idealized, Says Fay King

HA! HA!
NUDIST COLONY
UGLIEST PICTURE IN THE GALLERY
SOME PERSONS ARE AFRAID TO SAY WHAT THEY REALLY THINK ABOUT AN UGLY NUDE FOR FEAR THEY WILL BE CONSIDERED PRUDES!
FAY-KING

By FAY KING

Nothing seems more ridiculous to me than nudists.

That human beings should wish to wander about without any clothes on, when Nature in her wisdom has seen fit to feather and fur every bird and beast, even those native to the tropics, is so inconsistent.

Nothing is uglier than a plucked chicken, or a skinned rabbit, and humans without clothes are just as unattractive.

Even in art the nude is only beautiful when the sculptor or painter has idealized the model to heroic or spiritual lines.

But no conceit ever exceeds the conceit of bad taste, which flaunts itself, dismissing all who resent it as narrow-minded prudes.

A Sequel Heart Of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Fears a Stormy Session With Husband

Lillian turned from the telephone, with a pardonable little air of triumph about her.

"Well, old dear," she said, "the first position has been taken. Helena is with us, heart and soul. I knew she would be, once her first little feminine grouch was over. She'll have those gowns rushed through, and they'll be beauties, too. Helena's taste is impeccable. And she'll handle Avis Arlen, too."

"I wonder," I said slowly.

Lillian looked at me quickly.

"What's on the well known bean?" she queried.

"Only this," I said, "I don't trust that girl an inch."

"Who does?" Lillian countered quickly. "But what chance will she have for mischief, with all of us riding herd on her every minute?"

"I know," I said, "but I would feel safer about that gown if Mrs. Brixton brought it out here with her, instead of leaving it for Avis to bring the next morning."

WILLING TO EXPLAIN

"My sainted great aunt!" she exclaimed, staring at me. "You think the girl would spoil the gown, so that she could wear one of her own choosing, because pale green and silver are the colors she affects for evening? Surely she wouldn't dare—"

"I feel that she has the effrontery for anything," I interrupted.

"Then we'll spike her little guns," Lillian said promptly. "What d'ye want me to do—get in touch with Helena and tell her to bring the dress out, but to let Avis remain under the impression that it is still at the shop so that she will stay over and call for it the next morning?"

"Yes, but that will take a lot of explaining."

"I'm the niftiest little explainer in all the counties of New York state," she said, "and this will be easy. When we call the shop in the morning we'll ask to have Helena call us as soon as she gets in.

"Then I'll put Helena wise as to just how she's to manage, so that Miss Avis will walk into the shop upon the morning of the wedding and be met with the information that, by some desolating mistake, the gown was sent out with Mrs. Brixton. How does that strike you?"

"I am speechless with admiration," I told her, smiling.

"You'd better be," she retorted, with her gamin grin. "I'm good, I am, and I want you to appreciate it. And now, is there anything to prevent you from going to bed and getting a little sleep before it's time to do that telephoning in the morning?"

"Not a thing," I told her, but was conscious that I was not speaking all of the truth. There was no work for me to do or plan, but—I had the feeling that Dicky had not yet said all he meant to say upon the subject of Hugh's trip with me to Patchogue to meet Avis Arlen.

MADGE WORRIED

"You'll never make a poker player," Lillian said with a keen, appraising look at me. "You may not have anything else to do tonight, but there's plenty on your mind. Now you know I'm no butter-in, and if you don't want to spill anything, cover up the soup kettle. But—sometimes when you're as full of affairs as you are just now, you get a wrong slant on things, that could be straightened out with a word from somebody on the outside looking in."

I crossed to her and kissed her warmly.

"What a brick you are!" I told her.

I hurriedly sketched for her the scene when Dicky had passed Hugh and me on the wood road, and was surprised and chagrined to see her double over with laughter.

"Forgive me!" she said, wiping her eyes, "but I'd have given a good deal to have seen the faces of those two lads. But you say Dicky took your explanation gracefully?"

I nodded.

"Then," she said sapiently, "I think you haven't much to fear. Now, 'get you to a nunnery, go!' I'll attend to the varlets in the living room."

"Thank you, and good night," I told her, as I went out of the little study and up the stairs to my own room. I was already seated at my dressing table in pajamas and lounging robe, braiding my hair, when Dicky's knock sounded upon my door.

I felt my pulses pounding as I turned my face toward the door and called "Come in."

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Sacro-Iliac Strain Is Common

"How's Your Sacro-Iliac?" This is the title of an amusing short story recently published in a leading journal.

Dr. Copeland

The story accurately portrays the torture endured by a victim of this disorder. Though the author is not a physician, he clearly distinguishes between the sufferings from rheumatism, lumbago, neuritis and the excruciating pain of sacro-iliac strain.

The sacro-iliac joint is the point of articulation between the lowest portion of the spine and the hip bone. Because of its position, this joint is easily dislocated, strained or injured.

The damage can usually be traced to a fall, a sudden twist or blow. It may follow sudden lifting of a heavy object, but also it may result from the most trivial of exertion.

Sacro-iliac strain is a common affliction of overweight individuals. It may occur in persons whose occupation requires standing, walking or sitting in uncomfortable positions.

The pain in an acute attack of sacro-iliac strain may be so severe as to require the administration of an opiate. Sitting or lying in bed even, may be painful and the sufferer prefers to stand. The upright position may be the only one in which relief is obtained. The pain is excruciating and as a rule passes down the back of the thigh into the calf of the leg. Occasionally it may travel to the toes.

In most cases pain is relieved by immobilizing the strained joint. This is done by strapping the back with adhesive plaster. It is best to start from one hip and extend the adhesive to the opposite side and continue until the several layers of adhesive plaster overlap. This gives support to the back and prevents further strain on the joint.

Whenever possible, it is advisable to resort to complete rest in bed for several days. I have known sufferers from this trouble to complain of pain for several weeks. They were only relieved of their distress by going to bed and having complete rest. Prolonged rest minimizes the strain on the inflamed joint and hastens complete recovery.

I am frequently asked if supportive braces are beneficial to ward off attacks of sacro-iliac pain. If you have suffered from this affliction and the diagnosis has been confirmed by an X-ray of the affected joint, I would suggest that you have a support, brace or belt made. The success of this device depends upon how accurately it is made to your measurements.

Contract Bridge

HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

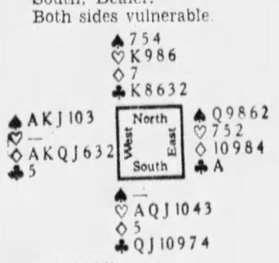
The Near-Record Set

Mr. William J. Bell, of Louisville, Ky., tells the story of an insufficient bid made by a Louisville business man which resulted in a 13-trick penalty, doubled and vulnerable, or 10,400 points. It is true that in taking the set of 10,400 points the player saved a vulnerable Grand Slam, but this was a case where the remedy was much worse than the disease. The whole thing came about through his attempt to overcall seven spades with a bid of seven hearts. When his opponents forced him to make his bid sufficient there was but one place to go and that was seven notrump, and at this contract his opponents proceeded to take all the tricks.

The hand was:

South, Dealer.

Both sides vulnerable.



The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♡	2 ♡ (1)	3 ♡ (2)	3 ♠ (3)
4 ♡	4 NT (4)	Pass	5 ♣ (5)
5 ♡ (6)	7 ♠	Pass	Pass
7 NT (7)

1—West's two-heart bid is Forcing to game.

2—North's bid is justifiable with his distribution, being an effort to stop his opponents from getting information.

3—With a partner who has promised a game in his own hand, East has quite a little bid himself.

4—West could bid six spades but this might shut out a possible Grand Slam, so he wishes to learn what response his partner will make to the conventional four-notrump bid, showing two Aces and the King of a bid suit.

5—This bid is entirely unnecessary. West, on the first round, has shown a void in hearts. That it is not the Ace is confirmed by South's vulnerable Opening bid and North's free Raise. Hence East could well bid six spades at once.

7—The fatal error. In the excitement South does not realize that West has bid a Grand Slam.

It is, of course, perfectly apparent what occurred. East and West took five spade tricks, seven diamond tricks and one club.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Is it necessary, when my partner opens with one club and I hold seven playing-tricks, to give him all four Raises at once?

Answer: It is usually undesirable to jump the bidding to game in a minor suit. One or two Raises may be withheld, thus allowing your team to arrive at a notrump contract which may be easily made, and also giving your partner an opportunity to use the four-notrump bid in an effort to reach a Slam.

MUSIC

'The Children's Crusade'
Carngie Music Hall

The Mendelssohn Choir, under Ernest Lunt's direction, gave us another memorable performance last night in Carnegie Music Hall when this brilliant chorus sang Gabriel Pierne's "Children's Crusade." At last we have stirred up enough interest among our music lovers to crowd the house, and they were surely rewarded for their coming.

Mr. Lissfelt

The music has many barren spots, the chorus for the mothers, the solo song of the sailor, and the narrator's recitatives are none too engaging.

But during the second scene the children have quite charming parts, the solo soprano melodies are often noble, the finale choruses, the quartet of female solo voices too.

What would be the effect with orchestral accompaniment we can only conjecture. Earl Mitchell did his utmost with the unwieldy organ accompaniment which early in the evening was far too penetrating.

Will Earhart's 200 public school children carried away honors. Not because their voices make one sentimental, but because they know their music well, having sung it from memory and with such delicate nuance worthy of far more experienced singers. Their stage deportment was a compliment to their teachers.

The Mendelssohn singers themselves came to their best only during the sailor's chorus and in the final chorus of praise. Whether because of their care in adjusting themselves to the volume of the children's voices or whether they did not catch the tempo, there were stretches of dragging as if they had lost hold of their purpose.

There were many solo singers, all local musicians and, in the main, worthy of the trust Lunt put in them. The quartet of women, Helen Bell Rush and Margaret Garrity, sopranos, and Viola Syrgerson and Mabel King, contraltos, sang offstage and their music was quite finely delivered.

Margaret Spaulding Stockdale has an excellent style and in the part of "Allys" had many a line to show her beautiful voice. Mildred Cunningham's "Alain" was less effective though secure. Letty Liffler sang the mother.

Among the men Harold Haugh could have done much more with the part of the narrator, musically speaking, and the one line for Raymond Griffin seemed not just the quality for such an important moment. F. H. Hammon sang the part of an old sailor rather dryly.

The general effect of this oratorio is rather tender, and we can highly praise those whose efforts unite the work of so fine a choir with the work of the many sincere musicians in our public schools. J. FRED LISSFELT.

GLOBE TROTTING WITH LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

She reports that she has a tiny dog with five legs. It is 3 years old and gets around as well as the robin with the wooden leg mentioned here some time ago.

Albert G. Baker—At the first opportunity that presents itself I'll ask the Mayor-elect the question you submitted.

* * *

Harold W. Arlin, radio's pioneer announcer and my predecessor, was in town Saturday. He accepted an invitation to say hello to some of his pioneer listeners from the Globe Trotter's microphone. He pointed out that the Pitt-Nebraska game of 1915 was the first game to be "aired." He was doing the "airing" and got so excited when Nebraska made a touchdown that a modulating meter blew out in the radio station. Those were the days when a station went off the air if you looked cross-eyed at a microphone.

* * *

This next paragraph isn't intended for most of the globe trotters.

There are a few that have been burning me up lately with jibes at the problems I've been running.

They say they are too easy. They want something hard. Am I gloating now? You mathematical tough guys, let me see if you can take it?

A piece of rope weighs four ounces per foot. It is passed over a pully and on one end is suspended a weight and the other end a monkey. The whole system is in equilibrium.

The weight of the monkey in pounds is equal to his mother's age in years. The age of the monkey's mother added to the age of the monkey is four years. (1) The monkey's mother is twice as old as the monkey was when (2) the monkey's mother was half as old as the monkey will be when (3) the monkey is three times as old as the monkey's mother was when (4) the monkey's mother was three times as old as the monkey.

The weight of the rope or the weight at the end is half as much again as the difference between the weight and the weight plus the weight of the monkey. How long is the rope?

JUNIOR PATROL

Football season is almost over now, fellows!

We have had a good many letters from Junior Patrol members everywhere asking to join Junior's team, but his squad is pretty well filled up—in fact, we understand that basketball will be the next sport he will try soon. The football season usually ends along about the same time everybody eats Thanksgiving turkey, you know. Any fellows real anxious to play football ought to get in touch with the team nearest their homes.

Now here is a letter from Dorothy Belluscio, of 811 Twelfth street, McKees Rocks. She says:

"I follow the Junior Patrol in the Sun-Telegraph every evening and I enjoy it. I would like to be registered as a member, so will you please send me a membership card and an official emblem?

"I'm 9 years old and I'm in in the fourth grade. I go to the West Park School. My sister, who is in the seventh grade, is writing this letter for me. We both like school."

That's mighty nice and helpful of your sister to write your letter for you, Dorothy, but next time we hope we get a letter from you, yourself. Try it anyway. You bet we will send you your card and badge right away.

And here's a note from Jack Seery, of 1813 Davidson street, Aliquippa, Pa. He says:

"When you send me my membership card will you please send me 10 more pledges for the other kids on the football team that I play for. We are going to have a Junior Patrol football team."

We're sorry we can't do it that way, Jack. You didn't send the 10 pledges or copies you need to get membership cards for the other 10 men on your team. Send them in, and then you can have a Junior Patrol even after football season is over. Let us know, Jack.

More letters next time, fellows. In the meantime, don't forget that we are hoping that every Junior Patrol member will help all he can for the Welfare Fund and other drives to geet money for the poor and sick this year.

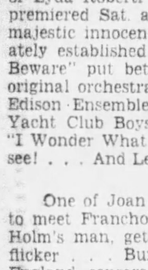
Jolson Says He'll Quit Films For the Radio

By HARRISON CARROLL

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 22.—Good or bad, "Wonder Bar" will be Al Jolsoln's last motion picture, the Comedian is telling all of his Hollywood friends.



Mr. Jolson

Nor does this mean that the mercurial mammy singer is dissatisfied with the progress of his new film at Warner Brothers. To the contrary, Al says the role is perfect for him, the script excellent and his relationship with the studio one of complete accord.

"Money talks," says Jolson, "and I can make more on the air than I can acting before the camera. Playing this picture cost me a $100,000 radio contract. Figure it out for yourself."

Another Hollywood celebrity who may turn to the radio is Mary Pickford. She has a marvelous offer from an important sponsor and this is one of the things that is carrying her to New York. Some say she also goes to discuss a reconciliation with Douglas Fairbanks. Her intimate friends, however, take this rumor with a grain of salt.

* * *

When Mary Boland returned with the De Mille company from Hawaii, she found a large batch of letters awaiting her. Three were from relatives asking for money. The comedienne shook her head, muttered:

"I'm just the kin they love to touch."

* * *

Even if it's love between Loretta Young and Spencer Tracy, there is always the ecclesiastical barrier to keep them apart. Both are devout members of a church that forbids remarriage after divorce. It's true that Loretta only went through a civil ceremony with Grant Withers, but Tracy was married by the church.

Miss Young

* * *

Just in case Fox officials don't know why Clara Bow is torched at them, it's still over the matter of "Marie Gallant." This was the one story that the red-headed star was keen to make, but the studio put her off by saying they could not get a satisfactory treatment. Then, when "Hoopla" got under way, they re-announced "Marie Gallant," with another star. Clara did a burnup and the embers are still hot.

The "It" girl continues to put off the idea of further picture work in favor of having a good time. She and Rex Bell are making the rounds of the late spots, and if a certain deal goes through for Rex, they'll carry out their idea of a trip to Mexico City.

Fine 'Faust' Won Favor In Nixon

By GEORGE SEIBEL

Gounod's melodious "Faust" was given a melodic interpretation by Fortune Gallo's San Carlovingians last night in the Nixon Theater, with Leon Rothier as a very Gothic and yet genial Mephistopheles, while Thalia Sabanieeva sang Marguerite with appealing tenderness.

Mr. Seibel

Where "Aida" calls for blatant brasses this poetic drama has an almost ecclesiastical undertone. The orchestra under Carlo Peroni did justice to all the finer shadings of the score, securing especially fine effects in the Cathedral music.

Faust, the somewhat wobbly hero of the legend, was sung by Dimitri Onofrei, who has a lyric tenor of pleasing metal. Bernice Schalker made a buxom Siebel, and Marion Selee as Martha had Mephistopheles earning whatever commission he got on his victims. Mario Valle as Valentine and Fausto Bozza as Wagner also sang well and acted acceptably.

The fair in Nuremberg presented an especially animated scene, the soldiers sang their martial chorus with thrilling effect, and the Jewel Song was beautifully given. But the "Salut au Demeure," the opera being sung in French, was the outstanding number of the performance, though the spinning song of la Sabanieeva was given with such delicate charm that it woke enthusiastic plaudits.

Settings and stage direction were extremely good, and the fine impression of the opening "Aida" was deepened by last night's bill. This afternoon Gounod's "Romeo and Juliet" and tonight Bizet's "Carmen" will be given.

Faked Accent In Film

Most popular movies have a happy ending, so the forthcoming one about the girl who faked an accent in order to win a contract in motion pictures will conclude with her winning stardom.

But it didn't happen that way in real life. Jean Williams, alias Sonia Karlov, who fooled Cecil De Mille to such an extent that he cast her in "The Godless Girl," did not become a famous star as a result of her deception.

In the movie version of this incident, a famous Swedish star becomes temperamental and walks off the set. In desperation, the director (Edmund Lowe will play the part) seeks a substitute, but girls with Swedish accents are scarce articles.

Finally he finds a very attractive blond selling balloons at a carnival, hires her and teaches her to speak like the Garbo-esque one who failed him.

His discovery is a girl who actually was "discovered" for the part, Harriett Lake, who has been singing and acting on Broadway and elsewhere for nearly four years.

To get back to the film story—when the now-accented Miss Lake is introduced to the big executive (Gregory Ratoff), he is completely taken in. And so delighted to have a new star to replace his temperamental actress that he throws a party.

There she is unmasked, but the resultant publicity reacts favorably and the carnival girl becomes a star anyway.

When Sonia Karlov's identity was revealed (by an envious actress who knew her when), she lost the lead in the De Mille picture and was punished by being forced to put on make-up daily, and keep it on all day at the studio, for the duration of her contract.

Plays and Players

By WILLIAM J. LEWIS

Among the stars in the San Carlo Opera performance of "Carmen" in the Nixon tonight, several nationalities are represented in the leading parts. Bourskaya, the Carmen, is from Russia, and the big-voiced Chief Caupolican, baritone, as Escamillo, is a Chilean Indian. He sings the Toreador song. America is represented by Sydney Rayner, who comes from New Orleans. As Don Jose he is cast in a role that he has sung in Paris. Harold Kravitt, while classed as an American basso, is of German parentage and is from the opera houses of Germany. He sings Zungka. The Italian section is represented by Francesco Curci, second tenor, and Natale Cervi, in the second basso role.

* * *

Marguerite Lang, Pittsburgh singer, will make her debut with the San Carlo by singing a role in "Cavalleria Rusticana" in the Nixon Thursday night. She was given an audition Monday and was immediately engaged.

* * *

"The Way to Love," starring Maurice Chevalier, with Ann Dvorak in the leading feminine role, will be on the Enright screen Thursday and Friday.

* * *

When Eugene O'Neill stepped into the light of publicity after a long seclusion it became known that he had two plays up his sleeve. One we have seen—"Ah Wilderness," now tickling the folks of New York. The other, it appears, is called "Days Without End," which is said to be in the usual O'Neill mood. It is expected to reach its days of beginning about mid-January.

Russian Grand Opera Here Next Week

The Russian Grand Opera Company will be heard in "Coq D'Or" in Syria Mosque on Thanksgiving evening. "Coq D'Or," or The Golden Cockerel, was Rimsky-Korsakoff's last opera. The book is founded on an allegorical poem by Poushkin. Max Pantelieff, artistic director of the company, will sing the leading baritone role of King Dodon.

The Club Rhythme, which has been closed for the past few weeks, will reopen Thursday evening with a new and entirely different show, featuring Herman Middleman and his Club Rhythme Orchestra. The Life of the Party

IF YOU have ever known a man like Wilfred McSmith, you can undoubtedly sympathize with the long-suffering lady who had the sad misfortune to be his wife. For Wilfred had an overgrown sense of humor. He was an inveterate practical joker, and he was never so happy as when he was making someone else miserable.

A few people (those whose acquaintance with him was the slightest) spoke of him as "the life of the party." A few women told Dottie McSmith that they envied her her comical and good-natured husband. They sighed and murmured that they wished they had a man like that, always joking and making things lively.

Dottie McSmith said little but she thought plenty. At the end of five years, she was heartily sick of the whole business. She was sick of punk puns and second-hand jokes. Her idea of heaven was a place where no one was expected to laugh for any reason at all.

Inasmuch as Dottie was invariably the subject of Wilfred's little pranks, she grew to resent anything even faintly resembling a practical joke. And inasmuch as Wilfred's jests grew more ambitious with the passing years, she grew to hate her life and long for some method of escape.

Herbert and Wilfred worked together. Perry had a small job in the office at a low salary. Wilfred had spoken once or twice of the other man, and one evening he invited him home to dinner. After he had introduced the two, Wilfred drew his wife into the kitchen and lowered his voice.

"This Perry," he said, "I brought him home because I feel kinda sorry for him. He's a queer bird. You know, no sense of humor."

"Is that so?" Dottie glanced toward the living room. And there was an unmistakable gleam of interest in her eyes...

After that, Herbert Perry came often to call on the McSmiths. Dottie could not understand why anyone who was not forced to do so should be willing to endure Wilfred's company. Then, as the weeks went by, it became evident that it was a desire to be with her that brought Herbert to the house. And she was forced to admit, too, that she was becoming genuinely fond of the man.

He was a meek and self-effacing sort. His only contributions to an evening's entertainment were dutiful and well-placed laughs at Wilfred's alleged jokes. He had no fund of smart sayings gleaned from newspaper comic strips or vaudeville acts. That in itself was enough to make him attractive in the eyes of Wilfred McSmith's wife.

After things had gone on in this fashion for several weeks, Wilfred came home one night with the disturbing news that Herbert hadn't shown up at work that day. Upon Dottie's insistence, he agreed to call at the other man's home and learn if anything serious were wrong.

He returned an hour or so later with the information that Herbert was sick in bed and had been unable to telephone. He had asked Wilfred to tell the boss that he would be in a few days later, and Wilfred had promised to do so.

It is true that Wilfred actually intended to do just that. But a few hours later, he hit upon a much better plan. Here was an opportunity to pull an absolutely perfect practical joke on Herbert, and Wilfred could not resist the temptation. The more he pondered on it, the more delighted he became. He laughed silently as he tried to visualize Perry's face when he returned to the office and found no job awaiting him.

The following morning, Wilfred went into the boss's office to deliver a message. It was not, however, the message Herbert had entrusted him with.

"I was down to Perry's house last night," he stated, "and he's got himself another job. He told me to tell you he wouldn't be back."

"Okay, McSmith," he muttered, "thanks!"

Then Wilfred went out into the main office to share his joke with the rest of the employes. There were a few who felt that it was a dirty trick, but the majority were reduced to helpless laughter. Wilfred McSmith was certainly a card.

A week or so later, Herbert came back to the office. Wilfred watched him go into the boss's private office, and he could hardly control himself. He could hardly wait to see the expression on Herbert's face when he came out.

An hour went by, and Herbert was still closeted with the boss. He was probably pleading for his job back, Wilfred reflected happily. But it was doubtful if he would get it. The boss had seemed good and sore that day.

When Herbert came out there was a strange smile on his face. He walked immediately to Wilfred McSmith's desk and began to talk rapidly.

"Wilfred," he began, "I want to do the right thing about this. That's why I want to tell you instead of leaving it to Dottie. We love each other, and she said she'd divorce you and marry me, but I didn't feel it was right to ask her to give up the things you could give her. I never made much money here.

"Well, Wilfred, old man, I'm sorry, but that's the way things are. Dottie's got to have her divorce now in order to marry me."

"Marry you?" he repeated. "How? You haven't even got a job."

"Don't kid yourself," Herbert smiled broadly. "The boss got in touch with me two days after I got sick. He seemed to be under the impression that I was leaving.

"I never had the nerve to ask for a raise myself, but he offered me a better job here and more money if I'd consent to stay."

AWAIT REPORT ON EXPO PLEA

A hearing on the application for a 50-year charter for the Greater Exposition Society, as a non-profit corporation, was held yesterday before William K. Johnston, master, appointed by court.

Johnston will file a report in court within the next few days. The charter is asked by a group which has been seeking the construction of a $6,000,000 exposition building on the site of the old exposition at the Point.

The new building would require a long-term grant of the land by City Council. Plans include space for industrial exhibits, boxing arena, garage, restaurant, convention hall and other enterprises.

The Western Pennsylvania Exposition Society, which fostered the old exhibit is not connected with the proposed corporation, although it is reported that some of its members are interested.

Baker Sees Larger Engineers' Sphere

The engineer of the future will have far more responsibilities, Dr. Thomas S. Baker, president of Carnegie Institute of Technology, predicted today in his annual report. He said engineering will eventually be taught as a graduate course like medicine and law and defended the profession from critics who seek to blame technology for present economic difficulties.

Dr. Baker said the first indications of recovery show modern business is inextricably linked to technology.

WELFARE FUND DRIVE WORKERS CONFIDENT OF GOAL

POLITICS

Machines Backing Age Doles to Save Selves

—By MARK SHIELDS—

HARRISBURG, Nov. 22.—The Philadelphia Republican organization, as well as some elements in less populous localities, has seen the light so far as political life is dependent upon an enlightened attitude toward social legislation.

Mr. Shields

The best evidence of this is the attitude taken in this session toward old age pension legislation.

In the House, Representative Arnold Blumberg, Philadelphia, introduced an old age pension bill exactly similar to that presented in the Senate by Senator Frank J. Harris, of Pittsburgh. The Philadelphia and Allegheny County Republican organizations presumably will attempt to make the Blumberg bill the vehicle for old age assistance.

But in the Senate the significant thing was that the Harris bill was sent to the Appropriations Committee, of which Senator Harry Bell, of Fayette County, is chairman.

In the regular session, Senator Bell was one of the 27 Senators who voted not to take the old-age pension bill from the Committee on Pensions and Gratuities, of which Senator Lanning Harvey, of Luzerne, was the rather fumbling and hesitant chairman.

* * *

Senator Seizes Political Life-Saver

In the normal course of events the Harris bill in this session would have gone to the Harvey committee. In that event, however, had the committee reported the measure, Senator Bell would not have had the dramatic opportunity to rehabilitate himself which he needs if he is to be re-elected to the Senate from Fayette County.

It is assumed that Senator Bell's committee will report the Harris bill to the floor, and that the House Committee will do the same for the Blumberg bill. If the Senator's committee can facilitate matters he will have the opportunity to claim that he has taken the front rank in trying to bring about assistance for the aged in Pennsylvania.

The thing simmers down to a contest between the Republican organization with which Senator Bell is affiliated, and the Philadelphia and Allegheny County Republican organizations who in this session are playing their own game independent of State Chairman Edward Martin.

As a matter of fact, the old-age legislation now before the Legislature is something of a faking proposition. It has no relation whatever to the old-age pension amendment which was defeated in the last session. The average citizen may believe that members who now vote for assistance to the aged are recapturing the ground they lost last winter.

* * *

Make-Shift Measures Born of Deceit

But the thing they vote on now is not old-age pensions. It is assistance to the aged. And in order to become eligible to this assistance a man or woman must make representation that he or she is indigent, in other words, has no means whatever of sustenance, except that which is furnished by the state.

That means an elderly person must bring proof that his relatives, no matter how near, are unwilling to furnish any aid.

Brought down to its basic principles, the only thing being served by the measures now before the Legislature is to transfer to the state the cost of caring for aged persons now borne by the counties.

Senator Bell, Senator Parkinson and a few others whose political futures are jeopardized by the votes they cast last session may be able to save themselves through a favorable vote on the Harris or Blumberg bills at this time. If they can, it's all right with me, as most of them are sociable and personably acceptable gentlemen.

However, it is only just that the whole situation should be clearly set forth and that the public should know just what this old-age assistance agitation amounts to in this special session.

The best evidence that this old-age assistance legislation is not a parallel of the old-age pension amendment which was blocked in the last session is that many organizations which in the previous winter were for the constitutional amendment are against this proposal. They claim their whole fight will be set back. Mr. Pinchot says that the principles embodied in the Blumberg and Harris bills are half-loaves, which are better than nothing.

It is not, however, bread which is much more than politically palatable.

Postmasters Hear Eilenberger, Kelly

Principal speakers at a meeting of the Western Pennsylvania Postmasters' Association in the Penn-McKee Hotel, McKeesport, last night were C. B. Eilenberger, third assistant United States Postmaster General, and Congressman Clyde Kelly.

Prior to the meeting Herman Raithel, president of the association, conducted Eilenberger and Kell yon a tour through the McKeesport Tinplate Company's plant at Port Vue.

Wife Charging Man Untrue Wins Divorce

Hearing that her husband had paid attention to another woman, she mentioned it to him, but he told her to mind her own business, Mrs. Beulah Christy, of Elizabeth, testified before Judge W. Heber Dithrich, who granted her a divorce from J. Sterling Christy.

Mrs. Christy, a music teacher, said her husband had gone to Detroit with another woman.

SLEUTHS PROBE GIRL'S SUICIDE; LOVE BLAMED

County detectives today were investigating the reported suicide of Miss Lillian Logan, 24, domestic in a Ross Township home.

The young woman, employed at the home of Samuel Shaw, 725 Harden drive, North Hills, was found in her bed, a bullet wound in her head, by Mrs. Shaw, who heard the shot, according to the Coroner's report.

Mrs. Shaw summoned Dr. Charles Halverstadt, of Perrysville, who ordered the girl's removal to Allegheny General Hospital, where she died a short time later. Her home was in Gibsonia.

The bullet passed through her head. A .32-caliber revolver was found nearby.

James Burrell, of 22 Isabella street, who was leaving the hospital after visiting his mother, a patient there, helped carry Miss Logan into the emergency room. After reaching his home, he fainted three times. Police summoned Dr. John Wilson, city physician, to attend him.

Deputy Coroners said Miss Logan was despondent over a love affair.

MAYOR HAILS ANNIVERSARY

The proclamation reads, in part:

"I, John S. Herron, Mayor of Pittsburgh, call upon all citizens to make suitable observance of the city's anniversary. Fly the flag! Review the history of the fall of Fort Duquesne and identify the noble characteristics of our pioneer forefathers in the traits of present-day Pittsburghers.

"May I also commend to your attention the anniversary observance to be held in the Chamber of Commerce Friday noon under the joint auspices of the Chamber and the Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania, with United States Senator David A. Reed and Dr. Solon J. Buck as speakers. Participation in this program would be an appropriate form of personal celebration."

Driver's Condition Regarded Serious

The condition of Lawrence Kripp, 44, of 617 Industry street, who, police say, fired four bullets into his head Monday, was still regarded as serious by physicians at South Side Hospital today.

Kripp, a driver for a baking company, shot himself in the company garage at Sawmill Run boulevard and Bausman street, according to police.

Drummers Needed By Marine Corps

WILL ROGERS SAYS

SANTA MONICA, Cal., Nov. 22. To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

After reading Mr. Barney Baruch's non-inflation article in a little Philadelphia periodical, run by Benjamin Franklin and Horace Lorimer, I was talking last night on the phone to Mr. Baruch in New York, and here is a very interesting thing he said:

Will Rogers

"This fellow down in Washington is not going to be stampeded by the U. S. Chamber of Commerce, or any the rest of us non-inflationists, or by the inflationists either. He listens to all of us.

"And then regardless of professors, pedagogues or economists or financiers, he makes up his mind himself, and he is going mighty easy, and I think will handle this money situation in a way that is beneficial to the majority, if not to a small minority."

Yours, WILL.

Operator 13 by ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

Man Misrepresents Himself and Girl Spy Faces Capture

Read This First

Gail Loveless, at 20, became a spy in the Federal service and was designated as Operator 13. In the disguise of a quadroon laundress, she was sent to the headquarters of Gen. J. E. B. Stuart, Confederate cavalry leader, who was planning a daring raid into Pennsylvania.

Capt. Gailliard, leader of Stuart's spies, flirted with her, kissed her, fell half in love with her and was ashamed of himself. He and Belle Boyd, most famous Confederate woman spy, were convinced that "Lucille Lyndon," as she called herself, was a genuine colored girl, and harmless. But Vespasian Chancellor, Gailliard's colleague, suspected her. Eventually he exposed her as a spy. She stole Gailliard's horse, struck him in the face with his own pistol and fled.

Barred from flight in any other direction, she boldly joined Stuart's cavalry as it started north on its Pennsylvania raid. She cajoled Yellow Bob, Stuart's groom, into letting her ride one of the General's horses. She stole a farm boy's clothes to improve her disguise. Chancellor's "instinct" led him to a stable where Operator 13 had hidden in a hayloft. Gailliard, with Chancellor, persuaded the latter to go away.

Operator 13, taking Gen. Stuart's horses, rode away. Chancellor pursued and Gailliard followed him. The girl ambushed and trapped both, separately, and made them give her their parole, on pain of instant shooting. The three saw a group of blue-clad soldiers ride into a clearing below them and hang a man. Frantically, Operator 13 bade her prisoners get the horses and flee. Gailliard hesitated to kiss the girl.

Operator 13 then rode to Emmitsburg. She was frightened by a man who recognized Gen. Stuart's horses. He gave the secret Federal passwords, but still she suspected him.

Now Go On With the Story

(Republished from Cosmopolitan Magazine and soon to appear on the screen as a Cosmopolitan production made for Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer and starring Marion Davies.)

By ROBERT W. CHAMBERS

"Do you doubt me, ma'am?"

But she couldn't really doubt him after his correct reply to passwords known only to Federal Secret Service agents.

There came the noise of trotting horses from the main street: two troopers in blue ambled past. They laughed together and bit into red apples as they jogged along. Clearly Federal cavalry in force were not far away.

"Very well," said Operator 13, "you may take me to Col. Rush at once."

But the young man appeared to have changed his mind. His eyes followed the Yankee troopers until they disappeared. "No," he said, "you had better get a little sleep. The Sixth Lancers should arrive at any moment, now, and you can see Col. Rush then.

"I thought you wanted me to go with you. I can keep awake, I believe."

"No," he said: "I've got to go on to the river, and you can't stick on your horse that far."

The girl in her ragged shirt and pants slid limply from her saddle to the ground and leaned against Skylark's shoulder. Operator 107 mounted his horse, took the halter of Lady Margrave and the bridle of Skylark from her limp grasp.

"You ought to be quite safe, ma'am, until our people arrive," he said soothingly. "Just lie down in the grass, yonder, and go to sleep under those trees until Pleasanton's trumpets or Rush's bugles wake you and"—he looked hard at her—"and end your troubles forever."

Her Report

Operator 13 unclosed her dark eyes.

"Have you any message for Colonel Rush, ma'am?" inquired the scout. She forced herself to understand and to answer: "Yes; the Rebel force blew up all the quartermaster's stores in Chambersburg last night. They have with them nearly 2,000 stolen Pennsylvania horses. They took no Maryland horses or cattle. Their regiments are the First, Third, Fourth, Fifth, Ninth and Tenth Virginia cavalry; the Seventh and Ninth North Carolina; the Third South Carolina; two legions; and a flying battery of four guns from Pelham's horse artillery . . . Two thousand sabers; four guns; 2,000 led horses for remount; and many Union prisoners . . . Jeb Stuart commands. Major Von Borcke went back to the river after crossing under fire with the pickets. Jackson's infantry hold all the hill-passes. A cavalry raid by Averell, in force, at McCoy's Ford might ruin Jackson. Tell Colonel Rush to telegraph Major Allen . . . I must sleep, now."

"I don't know."

"Did Mrs. Edmonds?"

"I don't know. They hanged a man near Black Gap—I mean, our people hanged him. It was horrible."

Operator 107 turned sharply away. "Yes, ma'am," he said gently . . . "Did Vespasian Chancellor follow you?"

"Yes."

"Did Captain Gailliard?"

"Y-yes." At the mere sound of his name, she felt the mounting blood stimulate her heart and pulse and cheek once more.

"Near Black Gap. After the hanging."

Lady Greensleeves

"With Jeb Stuart, I suppose."

Operator 107 bent from his saddle and spoke again to her under his breath: "I understand that a Confederate Secret Service agent known as Lady Greensleeves has been living here in Emmitsburg with her pretty little daughter."

Gail Loveless looked up, startled.

"Yes. Is she here in Emmitsburg?"

"She was here a week ago. That's why I came over—to arrest her. I haven't been able to discover any trace of her, and I believe she's gone on South. She was boarding here, last week, under the name of Mrs. R. Howe—she and that pretty child of hers—but she left on the tenth I'm told, and is now probably with Jeb Stuart's raiders."

"Well, ma'am, I've never seen her but Maj. Allen's records show she's a lady, born and a handsome one. A little taller than you are, ma'am; a graceful figure and a cultivated voice and manner."

"Who is she in private life?"

"She was a wealthy widow in Washington, and very lovely to look at. And—if you will excuse the freedom, ma'am—it is reported that she became the—mistress—of Lord Napier, the British minister to Washington. And it is believed that the child with her is their daughter. That ma'am and her violet-colored eyes and red-gold hair is our record of Lady Greensleeves, taken from the Old Capitol Prison where, lately, she was held on charges of doing terrible mischief to the United States."

"What did she do?"

"She was Beauregard's spy. She cost us thousands of men at Manasses, ma'am."

"Do you think it possible she might still be here in hiding?" asked the girl.

"It might be so, ma'am. But I am instructed to go on and look for her near New Market; and, if she isn't there, to search for her along the river fords. And that is what I am going to do . . . Are you feeling some better now?"

"Yes, thank you."

"Well, ma'am, I have your report and your horses"—he smiled—"Jeb Stuart's horses; and I shall deliver both with your compliments . . . Are you hungry?"

"No."

"Then go and sleep under the trees, ma'am; and when you awake to the racket of Union bugles, if you should see a lovely lady with angelic eyes and angel's hair, take a couple of Col. Rush's fancy lancers, arrest her without warrant and hold her until you hear from Maj. Allen."

"Are there any Union Cavalry here now?"

"No, ma'am."

Operator 13 regarded him with hollow, brilliant eyes burning with excitement. She had seen such a woman on the verandah of the Morris house not 10 minutes ago. And there was a pretty child with her. Everything histrionic in her nature was now wide awake.

A Short Note

For here was real drama. Here was the hiding place of a beautiful and dangerous woman who had sent thousands of Union soldiers to death. And she, Gail Loveless, was going to arrest her!

"Mr. Bailey," she said in an unsteady voice, "would a military court hang Lady Greensleeves if I arrested her?"

"No, ma'am. She is to go to Fort McHenry for the duration of the war."

"Nothing worse. You are sure?"

"Major Allen told us these are Mr. Stanton's orders. That Mr. Lincoln wouldn't allow any hanging in this case.

"Have you pencil and paper?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Let me have them."

He fished out several crumpled sheets, and a pencil; and Operator 13—always the born actress—wrote: Lady:

Ef you all wants a nigger boy run your errants i is hangin' roun' town near de pos' office all day ma'am so no mo'.

Mose.

She showed it to Operator 107.

"Yes," he said, "if she's here. What a plot for a play," he added, smilingly.

"I'll leave it at the post office for her. All women take fatal chances to get their mail. If Lady Greensleeves is in Emmitsburg she'll get this note!"

"Take it over now," he suggested.

"She passes as Mrs. Rosalie Howe, of Emmitsburg. Write, 'care Mrs. Morris.'"

Operator 13 folded the paper and wrote: "Missus Rosy now care Miss Morus," on the outside. It was a grimy bit of illiteracy and looked genuine.

"I'll wait till you come back," said Operator 107.

So Gail Loveless, drunk with the excitement of her drama, took the note to the postoffice, where the fat assistant postmaster was at supper in a rear room.

"What you want now, little darky?" he called out fretfully, a cup of coffee poised under his chin whiskers.

"Letter fo' Missus Howe, suh. Whar de lady's box?"

Steals Letters

She laid the note on the counter. "Is de lady in town, suh?" she inquired.

"No," he grunted.

"When yuh reckon she-all fixin' tuh come back?"

"I don't know. Her mail goes to Mrs. Gus Morris. Leave the letter, I tell you."

Gala Santa Pageant To Enter Downtown From North Side

Officially ushering in Pittsburgh's Christmas season, characters from nursery rhymes, fairy tales and Mother Goose books and a fantastic collection of prehistoric beasts and grotesque figures designed by Tony Sarg will march with Saint Nick in a gala "Santa Claus" parade Saturday.

The route for the parade, to begin promptly at 9 a. m., was announced today as follows: Formation at Ridge and Irwin avenues, North Side, moving east on Ohio street to West Diamond square, over South Diamond to Federal street, across the Sixth Street Bridge to Penn avenue, to Stanwix street, up Liberty and Sixth avenues to Smithfield, turning up Fourth avenue into Grant street.

The reviewing stand will be in front of the City-County Building, where Mayor John S. Herron will officially welcome Santa to Pittsburgh for the season.

Ten divisions, each designed to express a particular phase of the Christmas season, will comprise the parade, headed by 12 trumpeters, Mayor Herron and Director of Public Safety Harmar D.

Comic Page Characters Aid 'Buy Early' Drive

Fourteen mirth-provoking characters of the Sun-Telegraph comic pages will step forth next Saturday from their usual habitats to do their part in urging Pittsburgh shoppers to start their Christmas buying before Thanksgiving this year.

Standing side by side with Santa Clause, they will greet wide-eyed Pittsburgh children in the toy departments of 14 Pittsburgh stores all day Saturday, stationed as follows:

Barney Google, Boggs and Buhl; Tillie the Toiler, Frank and Seder; Polly, of Polly and Her Pals, Friend's; Maggie and Jiggs, Gimbels; Inspector Day, Hahn Furniture, 809 Federal street; Popeye, Horne's; Mickey Mouse, Kaufmann's; der Captain, of The Katzenjammer Kids, McCreery's; Felix the Cat, May-Stern's; Toots and Casper, Rosenbaum's; Skippy, Spear's, and Boob McNutt, Sears-Roebuck.

Concentrated efforts to spur Christmas shopping before Thanksgiving were hailed today by Leo Lehman, chairman of the newly-organized Retail Trade Council, formed to further NRA policies among Pittsburgh merchants. Lehman said:

"If shopping can't be made patriotic, the spirit of Christmas and Santa Claus ought to be enough to carry the movement to success. It is good economy and sound economics to buy now."

Stimulus to the NRA provided by the drive, which is dependent for success on public response, lies in the fact repeatedly stressed by President Roosevelt in his appeals for support of the NRA that immediate increases in buying mean immediate increases in employment.

With the launching of the movement it was pointed out that the period between Thanksgiving and Christmas this year is 30 per cent shorter than in any other year since 1922, and provides only 20 shopping days before Christmas.

The extension of the shopping period on the part of Christmas buyers would open the pre-Yuletide season approximately a week before Thanksgiving.

WORLD'S FAIR EXHIBITS OPEN IN STORE

Many prominent Pittsburghers attended the opening of McCreery's special exhibition of displays from Chicago's Century of Progress Exposition last night.

Thousands saw the exhibit during the evening.

Nearly 100 guests, representative of Pittsburgh firms, attended a dinner in the dining room which preceded the opening and which was addressed by Arthur C. Kaufmann, vice president of McCreery's.

Mr. Kaufmann was congratulated by Mayor John S. Herron, who referred to the display as "a splendid idea and a fine achievement."

Mr. Kaufmann, in his address, said the exhibits were brought to Pittsburgh for the benefit of thousands here who could not attend the fair. A number of other exhibits of historical interest augment the Chicago collection, he said.

Following the dinner, a dozen special windows were unveiled by business and social leaders headed by Mayor-elect William N. McNair.

Others who participated included Mrs. Wilmer M. Jacoby, Mrs. Oliver Haller, Cy Hungerford, Miss Helen McCloskey, Mrs. W. B. Bickel, Elmer Layden, Miss Bianco Saroya, Capt. Al Williams and Chief Chibinoos, chief of the Chippewa tribe.

The number of visitors at the opening surpassed expectations. The exhibits are well distributed throughout the 11 floors. Dancing on the ninth floor was an opening night feature.

Special details of police were present as throngs jammed the sidewalks when the windows were unveiled. Following the ceremony, the store's exhibition was thrown open to the public. It will be open daily during store hours until December 2.

Make These Smart Purses

A purse, though just an accessory, can make or spoil a woman's entire appearance. Naturally every well-dressed woman longs for a variety of bags to give her the right choice for both the occasion and the costume. This season purses are smart according to their form. The envelope purse has rebelled at a sheer envelope effect and goes into points that are decidedly graceful. Th flap, though, limits itslf in size and no longer covers the entire front of the bag. This bag, pattern 602, can be made for daytime or more formal wear according to the material used. Tweed or other light woolen material, suede, faille silk, velvet or an ornate material interwoven with metallic threads, all are effective and the bag is very simple to make.

Pattern 603 goes in for feminine softness. The row of little pleats at each side give the purse a fullness that makes it decidedly attractive in such materials as satin, velvet, faille or a soft woolen material, all of which lend themselves to a little drapery.

Send 10 cents for each pattern—20 cents for both—to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

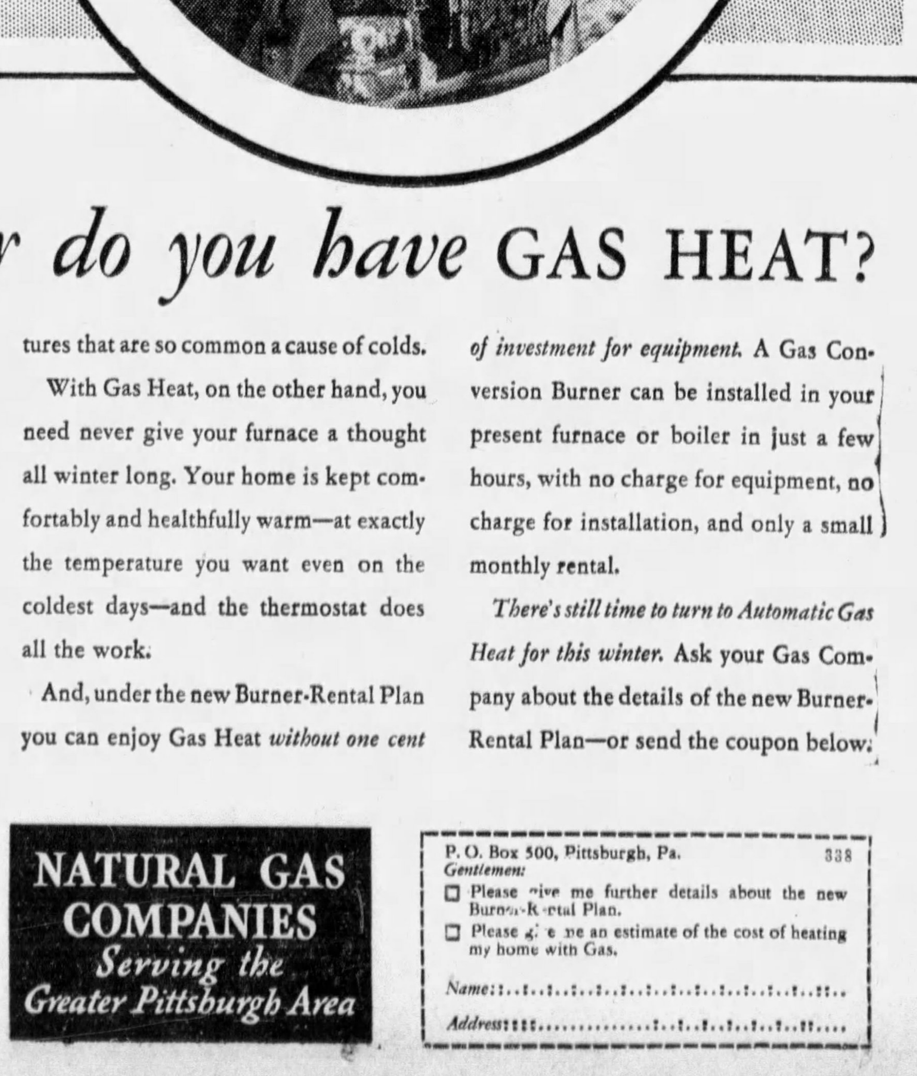
Do you DREAD WINTER ?



. . or do you have GAS HEAT?

WITH old-fashioned hand-fired, smoky fuels, winter is all too often a nightmare of dirt, dust and drudgery. It is a time of extra work. Early morning trips to the basement. Endless climbing of cellar stairs. Extra cleaning of rugs, curtains, drapes. Constant anxiety about the furnace that spoils many an evening's pleasure. And more important, it is a time of varying, up-and-down temperatures that are so common a cause of colds.

With Gas Heat, on the other hand, you need never give your furnace a thought all winter long. Your home is kept comfortably and healthfully warm—at exactly the temperature you want even on the coldest days—and the thermostat does all the work.

And, under the new Burner-Rental Plan you can enjoy Gas Heat without one cent of investment for equipment. A Gas Conversion Burner can be installed in your present furnace or boiler in just a few hours, with no charge for equipment, no charge for installation, and only a small monthly rental.

There's still time to turn to Automatic Gas Heat for this winter. Ask your Gas Company about the details of the new Burner-Rental Plan—or send the coupon below.

CITY TEACHERS FIGHT SALARY REDUCTION

In connection with their campaign of opposition to unwarranted cuts in educational appropriations and school budgets, the Pittsburgh Teachers Association is distributing a printed address by A. Lincoln Filene, Boston merchant and economist.

Filene, endeavoring to prove it is good business to maintain the progress of the present school system without impairment, says:

"Billions on billions of dollars are invested in factories, railroads, mines, farms and stores. These billions of dollars depend for profit on one thing—the consuming public. Now, the uneducated man or woman is a poor market for goods and services. The educated man is a good market. The more education the public has, the better market the public is for the products of business. So you see that business must have education from a purely selfish point of view."

Pointing out that the schools are one of the most important factors in our national economy as a source of employment, he says:

"Education is one of the largest businesses in the country. The public schools cost us about two billion dollars a year. They employ a million teachers—more employes than the great automobile industry. Education does not turn out automobiles or fuel, but it does turn out something very important—citizens of the United States."

OPERATOR 13

By Robert W. Chambers

lancers ridin' de street today?" she chirped.

"Yes, an' there's more Yanks on the way," growled the postmaster. "What do you want hangin' around thisaway?"

"Nuffing, suh."

"Are you a contraband?"

"Yaas, suh. An' I jes' a-honin' fo' a job run errants."

"We don't want any contraband in Emmitsburg," grunted the postmaster, getting up to shut the intervening door.

The moment it closed, Operator 13 reached over and took two letters out of the niche marked "Morris," and stuffed them into her pocket. Then she went down the street to the horse trough, where Operator 107 sat in his saddle, still smiling.

"I think the woman really is in town," said Operator 13. "Tell Major Allen that I'll try to arrest her. But I've got to get some sleep first, Mr. Bailey.

"All right. You'll hear bugles before midnight, ma'am, your troubles are nearly ended."

Operator 13 nodded wearily, watched him ride away west by south with Lady Margrave and Skylark at lead! then stood unstirring for a moment more in the red afterglow—a ragged, forlorn little figure in the deserted lane.

The assistant postmaster of Emmitsburg presently emerged from his quarters behind the postoffice. He saw the ragged Negro boy cross Main street and lie down under the sycamore trees.

It was after sundown; time to lock up the postoffice and go to bed. He started to blow out the candles in the dusky place. And saw a little white girl standing there in the sickly light.

"How did you get in?" he asked.

All Are Safe

"You left the back door open," she said with an enchanting smile.

She was a charming little thing of nine or ten, perhaps; violet-eyed, full-lipped, her plump, oval face framed in a shock of pale, gold hair.

"Is there any mail for mother?" she inquired

The fat postmaster put on his spectacles, peered into the Morris box, fished out a soiled, unstamped missive without an envelope and passed it over the counter. "I thought there was two more letters, but reckon I'm mistaken."

"Do you know who left this one?" asked the child.

The child looked curiously at the letter, then lifted her exquisite clear blue eyes to the postmaster.

"So you an' your ma has decided to come back to Emmitsburg," he remarked yawning.

"Yes, sir."

"Well, I hope you aim to stay with us. It's a quiet town but our folks is neighborly. Did you see them lancers gallop through town this afternoon?"

"Yes, sir."

"Well, tell your ma not to worry none. We're too far from the war to be scared. Let 'em act pompous so long as they do all their fightin' over to Frederick an' along the river. We're all snug an' safe up here in Maryland . . . You want a bit of striped peppermint, missy?"

"If you please, sir."

He unscrewed the zinc top of a jar of candy, handed her a stick striped red and white like a barber's pole.

The child curtsied her happy thanks, turned and went quickly away through the back door, the grimy letter clutched in one hand. She was rapturously sucking the peppermint stick. Passing the sycamores, she glanced down at the Negro lad; then, a little scared, ran on toward the Morris house, where her mother was awaiting her.

With her mother stood a young man in hickory shirt and butcher's boots, his straw hat in one hand. Three horses stood tethered at the hitching rail.

"Here is the letter Mother," said the child happily.

"Thank you," said Lady Greensleeves; "now, go to bed, darling." They kissed, and the child went into the house.

She-Devil

The young man nodded to her as she passed, and quietly continued his conversation with her mother "We've got all the roads and paths stopped to the northward, ma'am. Every Yankee courier who galloped through here from Frederick has been gobbled by Jeb Stuart's vedettes. If I could take that Yankee Secret Service spy out of here I'd do it; but she isn't able to sit her horse, and I dare not stay here any longer. Orders from Jeb Stuart are positive—'Wait in Emmitsburg till the road is clear, then don't spare spur till you are across the river and Stonewall's pickets stop you. Then tell him I'll cross at White's Ford.'"

"Do you think your road is clear now?"

"I'll wait a few moments more, m'am."

Lady Greensleeves said: "I'll take care of this young Yankee actress until the Confederate cavalry arrive."

"Watch her, ma'am," he said softly. "She is a kind of she-devil."

"Do you believe she betrayed your poor brother, Josiah?"

"She, or the other actress, Pauline Cushman, I reckon. Or Gus Littlefield. Or the Edmonds woman. They're all alike as so many snakes."

Lady Greensleeves laid a delicate hand on the young man's thin shoulder. "I really believe you had better leave those horses of Gen. Stuart in the barn. Any Yankee patrol would be sure to stop and hold you. And—you know what that would mean."

It meant hanging. Both understood that. Both also knew that his brother had been caught and hanged that same afternoon on a hayrick gallows surrounded by a square of Yankee cavalry.

The young man said: "I believe, ma'am, I could get cl'ar to the Potomac with one of the horses, anyway."

Patricia Pitt's Sprightly Comment on Pittsburgh Society Happenings

In Mayfair —With— Patricia Pitt

Flaxen blonde Margaret Rowe has introduced the shirtwaist evening mode.

She's the first one of the smart set I've seen in this newest whim of fashion, and a most provocatively charming style it is—it has that intriguing paradoxical touch that long, trailing skirts worn with modern bobbed heads first gave us.

Margaret, who was one of the deb program girls at the Mendelssohn Choir's concert last night in Carnegie Music Hall wore an amusingly tailored and tucked heavy white silk "shirtwaist" having above-the-elbow sleeves, with a long black crepe skirt, molded to the figure, of course. And she had a wide belt of scarlet.

Add Gala Touch

All the debs who distributed programs under the direction of capable deb Analana Beeson last night, were most decorative. They added a gala touch to the Mendelssohn Choir's biggest moment. The choir with a chorus of 200 little children from the Pittsburgh public schools, sang Pierne's "The Children's Crusade" to a near-capacity audience.

Mrs. Louis R. Schmertz, Jr. (Marcia Le Moyne), asked the debs to help. It proves what nice young things our debs are, I think, that they are so willing to give up an evening out of their busy young lives to help at this affair and that. And what's more, whether they are ushering, or handing the public programs, or dancing for charity, they do what they are asked to do with such willing grace.

Gowned In Blue

An interesting deep blue crepe frock with long sleeves slit from elbow to wrist, was worn by deb Margaret Taylor. Gwendolen Holmes, whose partner in program-passing last night was Marnie Hodge, chose a black crepe dress having white crepe sleeves, full to below the elbow and tight to the wrist. Marnie was in green crepe with puffed sleeves.

Choose Black

And I noticed Katharine Dangerfield, who wore black velvet. And with the debs was Dorothy Curry, who wore an interesting copper green, tree-bark crepe gown.

The audience was made up of parents of the young school children and those who also attend musical events in Pittsburgh, such as Mrs. John E. Nelson, Mrs. William Maclay Hall and Mrs. Henry Clay Adams. * * *

Mrs. W. Harry Brown gave what she described as "just a small tea" yesterday afternoon in her Pittsburgh home for her house guest, Mrs. George Barnett, of Washington.

The Pittsburgh Junior League is going in for pre-views this winter, and they are going to be "different." There'll be an admission fee, to be used for charities.

Art Show Pre-views

The day after the pre-views will be Junior League day, and beginning the following day the exhibit will be free, and open to the public. The first exhibit will be on view from December 12 to January 6.

These pre-views will precede each of the series of exhibits the league will have this winter, which Penelope Redd, Sun-Telegraph art critic, discussed in the paper yesterday. And she's most enthusiastic about the exhibits, to range from drawings of old masters to modern photography. * * *

Precede Series

Miss Ida Guffey and Miss Pauletta Guffey, with their brother, Joseph F. Guffey, are back from a week-end in New York. They attended a cocktail party given by the John Mason Browns.

Guests in New York

Mr. Brown, by the way, was the Twentith Century Club Monday morning speaker a week ago. He's a New York dramatic critic, you know.

Johanna Lawlor And Cleveland Man Marry

A bride of yesterday morning was Miss Johanna Lawlor, daughter of Mrs. Mary Lawlor, of Finley street. At 9 o'clock in Sacred Heart Church she married William B. Mapel, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Mapel, of Cleveland, with the Rev. Thomas Coakley officiating.

The bride's gown was of white velvet, and her bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Mary Lawlor was her sister's maid of honor and her gown was of copper leaf chiffon velvet. She carried yellow chrysanthemums. Walter Mapel served as his brother's best man.

After a honeymoon in the East, Mr. Mapel and his bride will make their home in Cleveland.

National Board Speaker To Address Young People

At the Young Peoples' Missionary Association's quarterly meeting at the Downtown Y. M. C. A. on Friday evening the speaker will be Mrs. Agnes B. Snively, of the National Board of Missions.

Stereoptican slides of Africa will be shown and special music will be furnished by a male quartet. The committee in charge includes William Dick, Jean Brooke, Margaret Celback, Fred March and William M. Thomas.

Gretchen Lappe Presented To Society at Luncheon

Today brings another debut party. With 50 some debs to be presented, every week has easily its quota of attractive deb parties.

Today Mrs. Charles B. Lappe, of Northumberland street, gave a luncheon in the popular Twentieth Century Club to present her daughter, Gretchen, to society.

The debutante wore a black and white costume — a white satin, long-sleeved bodice and a black crepe skirt. And epaulettes of broadtail distinguished the gown. Her hat was of black velvet and crepe, and small, of course, and her flowers were orchids.

Black satin with a small black hat were the choice of the deb's mother. And she had a corsage of orchids.

Pitcairn Pastor's Daughter Weds On Thanksgiving

Miss Mildred Dozer will marry William W. Frampton, of Saltsburg, Pa., on Thanksgiving Day. The bride-elect is the daughter of the Rev. and Mrs. C. E. Dozer, of Pitcairn. Mr. Frampton is the son of Mr. and Mrs. M. J. Frampton, of Greenville.

Church Scene Of Coffroth Nuptials

At a very pretty ceremony at 9 o'clock this morning in the Church of the Assumption, Bellevue, the Rev. Francis Mullen solemnized the marriage of Miss M. Katherine Coffroth and Daniel Francis Harigan, Jr.

The bride's gown was of blue velvet trimmed with ermine tails, and she wore a blue velvet hat and carried pink roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Peggy Coffroth was her sister's maid of honor and wore brown velvet with a brown hat and carried yellow roses. Serving as best man was Charles Harnish.

There was a breakfast later in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Kimmel Coffroth, of Bellevue. The bridegroom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Harigan, of Avalon.

After a motor trip through the east Mr. and Mrs. Harigan, Jr., will be at home in Bellevue.

Gossipy Chat With Nancy Jane

Debs, arriving at Mrs. Alan S. Humphreys' house the other day for some last-minute planning for the Cinderella Ball Thanksgiving Eve, were puzzled. They walked up and down before the solarium at the front of the home, Kinsman road, trying to decide which of the arched French doors was the entrance!

Mary M. O'Hanlon Is Married to D.W. Donehue

At 9 o'clock this morning, in St. Bede's Church, the marriage of Miss Mary M. O'Hanlon and David W. Donehue was solemnized by a cousin of the bride, the Rev. Joseph Fitzpatrick.

The bride wore a gown of sapphire blue velvet with a matching hat and carried tea roses. Her niece, Miss Mary Catherine Taylor, was maid of honor, wearing golden brown velvet. Her flowers were bronze colored chrysanthemums. William Corbert was best man.

After a reception in the home of the bride's mother, Mrs. Catherine O'Hanlon, of South Lang avenue, Mr. and Mrs. Donehue left for the South and will make their home in South Lang avenue when they return. The bridegroom is the son of Mrs. Sarah Donehue, of Wilkinsburg.

Sorority Alumnae Plans Scholarship Benefit

House of Shelter Bundle Benefit On Sunday

What one of its workers speaks of "as the most modest and the least known philanthropic institutions in the city," the House of Shelter, is having a benefit on Sunday afternoon. The officers and directors of the institution will receive their friends at the home in Locust street at an informal reception, but each guest is asked to bring a bundle of men's wearing apparel for those whom the home serves.

Daily the House of Shelter cares for men and boys (indeed for the last year the majority of its "guests" have been youths in their teens and early twenties) who are making their way from one part of the country to another. They are fed, housed, clothed and frequently given medical care and in the case of minors, returned to their homes when it is possible.

Mrs. Harry M. Stein is president; Mrs. I. L. Scheinman and Mrs. Emma Baer are vice presidents; Mrs. William Perlman is recording and Mrs. Samuel S. Cohen, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Samuel G. Osgood, treasurer. Mrs. Ella Friedman is chairman of hostesses for the bundle tea.

Here it is the middle of the week and our all-but-submerged head sticking out from amidst a sea of new numbers! From among them we have picked out these we mention here today. Call Grant 6500 and ask for the Spyglass to get the names of the shops . . . or send a stamped, self-addressed envelope for reply.

Our hair is full of excelsior . . . our brain full of pinks and blues . . . and our eyes still dazzled by the sight of the little girls' dresses we have just witnessed being unpacked by one of the stores.

Ostensibly, they're for Christmas. As a matter of fact, you can get them for your pride and joy right now . . . for $2.95. And of all the dainty little Miss America numbers we've seen . . . they are super values for their price. Two styles . . . one with smocking at the shoulders . . . one with tiered ruffled skirt . . . in white, pink, blue, peach and maize silk crepe. Sizes 1 to 3½.

A blouse a day doesn't "keep the doctor away" like an apple does . . . but it keeps little girls clean and neat. And these blouses will manage very nicely with their blue, green, red, or tan and white stripes, in broadcloth. With little pleated ruffled collars and jabots pinned with a Scottie dog pin . . . cute as Christmas! Short puffed sleeves . . . sizes 8 to 16 . . . priced $1.

Who said this was an age of miracles? We want to shake his or her hand. It MUST be when at this time of year . . . the height of the winter season . . . we can buy a beret . . . collarette . . . and muff of fur plush for $3.98! You who would not only LOOK cozy but BE that way, tarry not until you view this "new!" In black or white . . . at the price named. A honey of a Christmas gift for your "someone!"

Who doesn't like to hear about new places opening up? So put your little pink ears to the ground and listen to the thud-thud of our approaching news about the little gift shop we have toured! This new corner of town apparently has everything in it that gift-buying hearts could desire! And out of the lot we have picked a trick little item to mumble off into your ear.

It is a Japanese lacquer cabinet . . . of miniature size . . . about 8 inches high by 4 inches wide . . . handpainted in true Oriental style . . . and to be used for your jewelry. (If any!) There are three little drawers which pull out just like in a real chest . . . and the trinket will fit into, or rather onto, a vanity table without seeming awkward! Several sizes of these . . . the one we mention being 29c.

* * *

An item to take you all by storm if not surprise! Pure silk hose . . . in chiffon or service weight for 44c the pair or 85c for two pairs! In the newest shades for all street and evening occasions. And who wouldn't step higher and more handsomely when her stocking boxes boasted several pairs of these! We urge you, oh bargaineers and budgeteers, to hasten town-wards when this bit of gossip arrives!

We never know just what will take place next in the matter of jewelry! Because not satisfied with utilizing aluminum, cork and copper . . . we are now falling heir to the vogue of braided silk braid, fastened with chromium ball buttons and little gadgets of their ilk. Black, blue, dark shades and bright. In flat choker effects and bracelets to match! Smart . . . and $1 each.

A SUNDAY NIGHT SETTING

The sleek and simple Sunday night gown sketched right is developed in brown and eggshell shades. The frock itself is brown velvet; the short hug-me-tight jacket eggshell velvet. The band of fur which borders the jacket is mink, rather wider than the fur borders that we used to see used in this fashion. Note the gather string neckline and don't be surprised to learn that the back is cut very low.

By PRUNELLA WOOD

CONVERTIBLE dresses have taken on some new tricks since the recent repeal news knocked the spots out of speakeasy costumes, as it were. Your jacket topped formal gown has its second piece to change it from a dinner gown to one that can go to an afternoon reception rather than to provide a dinner gown and a full evening gown in the same model, as the "dry" days had it.

* * *

THE change has had a noticeable effect on colors as well as cuts, it appears. Instead of black, and more black, with a little very dark gray or very dark green by way of slight variety, such tints as fuchsia, beige, love apple, and opal blues are being used—all the shades, in fact, that look heavenly in a well lighted drawing room or restaurant. Lots of models show two shades, a dark gown with a lighter top, so that they can step out attractively with a dark fur coat.

This is the sort of gown with which the adventurous lady can try out the numerous hats which run to silly trailing veils or ostrich feathers. They are honeys if backed up correctly and a good, all 'round wedding reception, or maybe a festive christening, complete with appropriate gown and wrap, is just the scene they crave.

* * *

SHOES are very afternoon minded this season, fairly stalwart numbers having a frippery look that used to be reserved for evening or pajama slippers. Except in suede and kidskin, shoes that exactly match one's best gown still belong to the evening scene. A good stunt in choosing shoes, therefore, is to ignore the shade of the gown itself, and pick out models that match the fur one is wearing with the ensemble.

Who has your LOVE LETTERS?

LIKE A THIEF, she climbed through a man's window to get the letters that might have wrecked her sister's life. Trapped, threatened with arrest, forced to choose between her own ruin and her sister's, she was offered one chance to save herself. It meant playing a part, pretending to love a man she hated, submitting to kisses that filled her with passion in spite of herself. And, with every passing moment, she was falling deeper and deeper into the toils of this man who had so unscrupulously fascinated other women to their everlasting regret! All because of a few foolishly written words—the kind of letters that all men and women recklessly write at some time or other, and later wish they hadn't—letters that mean nothing when they are written, yet mean everything when they threaten to wreck a life's peace and happiness. Have you ever written such letters? Then you will understand.

SPORTS

Carnegie's Neat Gesture. ♦ Sunday Ball and No Clubs.
Duquesne Games Pleasing. Undue Credit to Coaches.

BOOKING DUKES POPULAR STEP BY TECH

One of the most popular moves and most sportsmanlike gestures ever made in local collegiate football circles is reflected in the announcement from Carnegie Tech today that arrangements have been completed whereby the Tartans will meet Duquesne University on the gridiron the next two years, the game of 1934 being scheduled for Saturday, November 17, at the Stadium. It provides an additional high spot in the home season for the fans, and assures that in spite of being dropped by Pitt the Dukes will not be deprived of the chance they have earned to participate in the major competition for the city championship.

Buddy Overend

Inasmuch as the Bluffites clearly had advanced to a point at which they might be considered worthy opponents for the other established big-timers here, a ranking that was proved when they drew 57,000 customers and held the powerful Panthers to a 7-to-0 score, it was a matter of general regret that Pitt decided not to continue relations in 1934. Carnegie's action saves the fans from the threatened disappointment of not being able to see Duquesne in competition with at least one of the other big local schools.

It was a neat bit of sportsmanship and a smart business move on the part of Graduate Manager Clarence (Buddy) Overend, of the Tartan, to give the Dukes the recognition they deserved and place on the schedule a game that is bound to prove one of the most popular and attractive numbers of the Pittsburgh season. It is to be hoped the two-year series will be extended to make the game a regular annual fixture, and that Pitt will see its way clear in 1935 to restore Duquesne to its schedule and institute a yearly three-cornered tussle for the city title.

MORE SALES MAY FOLLOW THAT OF KLEIN

The only surprising feature of the transfer of Chuck Klein from the Phillies to the Cubs, just announced though closed early in October, is that the parties didn't put up a stronger pretense at making it look like a trade. With only Harvey Hendrick, Mark Koenig and the untried Ted Kleinhaus going to the Phils, instead of Babe Herman and Pat Malone, as originally planned, the deal that sent Klein to the Bruins clearly came close to being an all-cash transaction.

It won't be surprising if other sales by the Phils follow. The acquisition of Hendrick, though that player is 36 years old, may mean that First Baseman Don Hurst is on the block, and unless it is intended to use Koenig at second or third base, Shortstop Dick Bartell also may be turned into cash. Why the Quaker owners should be so eager to get a new manager when seemingly there won't be any club to manage, isn't clear. Within a year they have sold Klein, Virgil Davis, George Davis, Whitney, Lee and Benge.

If they must continue to sell players to pay expenses, the usual alibi, their proper course seemingly, for their own business interests, and in fairness to their patrons, would be to sell the franchise and let somebody else operate it. And in the same city, announcement of the sale of some star players by the A's also is expected soon. It looks as though Philadelphia fans are going to get Sunday ball without ball clubs.

SMART PLAYERS MAKE COACHES LOOK GOOD

Jess Harper, athletic director at Notre Dame, says a gridiron coach very frequently is praised for a piece of smart football for which he deserves no credit and with which he had nothing to do. He relates that in his own coaching days Notre Dame once made a touchdown against Army because an Irish player, seeing the Cadets had switched to stop the system he had been instructed to use, crossed them up by sending the play to the other side of the line.

Jess Harper

Harper says those are things that cannot be taught to football players. A coach cannot map out plays in advance to take care of certain situations, because there are situations that cannot be foreseen. Only men of real football instinct will be able to take advantage of the possibilities that present themselves in the enemy's defense during the course of a game. It is the player able to do that instinctively who makes the coach look like a very smart man, when oftener than not, Harper asserts, the coach had absolutely nothing to do with the planning or execution of a successful strategic move.

BUCKLER RATED BEST PASSER IN EAST

Jack Buckler, the Waco terror, whose individual ability as an all-around halfback has had so much to do with Army's success, is rated by many critics as the most dangerous passer in the East. They say the 160-pound Texas streak can hit the target while running at top speed about as cleverly as any back they ever have seen.

Buckler's accurate passing to Army mates, while threatening an end run, has played havoc with the man-to-man defense of every opposing team. If the secondary comes up to stop his threatening sweep, he merely flips the ball over enemy heads to one of his own backs breaking behind the opposing halves. If the other side's backs refuse to come up, he keeps running with the ball. And football knows few harder jobs right now than stopping him when he cuts loose.

ANOTHER RING GIANT GETS TEST TONIGHT

Primo Carnera reached the Queensberry peak in spite of a bulk which many boxing men predicted would be a handicap to him. Tonight another giant of the ring will attempt to start up the same steep grade. Ray Impellittiere, a 23-year-old Italian-American of Newburgh, N. Y., standing 6 feet 7¼ inches and weighing 260 pounds, will get his acid test in a 10-round bout with Tommy Loughran at the Bronx Coliseum in New York. In five years, Impellittiere has had only 11 bouts, a limited experience that would appear hardly to qualify him for a bout with probably the smartest boxer among modern heavyweights.

Ray Impellittiere

However, the big fellow will not be wholly unprepared for the style of boxing he will be up against, as his chief sparring partner has been Joe Sekyra, who comes close to being Loughran's double in style, and who is a crafty gloveman and one of the fastest 180-pounders in the game. Good judges who have watched the Imp in his workouts have been favorably impressed by his actions and think he will give Loughran a surprise. In getting a main bout with Loughran, this second Carnera has made one of the biggest and quickest jumps in ring history, as only last winter he appeared in a lowly preliminary role to the man he will meet tonight.

CUBS MAY HAVE KLEIN, HAFEY IN OUTFIELD

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Reports that the Cubs already had completed a deal whereby Pitcher Pat Malone, together with Outfielders Kiki Cuyler and Jim Mosolf would go to the Cincinnati Reds in exchange for Outfielder Chick Hafey, were revived today as Cub fans welcomed the acquisition of Charles (Chuck) Klein, one of the greatest left-handed hitters in baseball.

The Klein deal, reported three weeks ago as closed, was announced yesterday. The Cubs obtained Klein from Philadelphia for cash, estimates of the amount ranging from $65,000 to $100,000, and three players—Utility Infielders Mark Koenig and Harvey Hendrick and Ted Kleinhaus, a left-handed pitcher recently obtained by the Cubs from Atlanta.

DEAL DENIED

Cub officials denied the deal for Hafey, but reports were that it already had been closed. For some time, it has been known definitely that the Cub officials believed a change would be beneficial for Malone, but Cuyler was regarded as a fixture with the team at least for several more years. Mosolf has been used mostly in a utility role.

Visions of a National League pennant in 1933 were seen by Cub fans through the Klein deal. The Philadelphia star won the National League batting championship last season and led both leagues in hitting with an average of .368. His lifetime average at Philadelphia, where he started his major league career, is .359. Wrigley Field, with its short right field fence always has been one of Klein's soft spots.

HAS FINE RECORD

Year	Batting Average	Fielding Average
1928	360	978
1929	356	966
1930	386	960
1931	337	971
1932	348	960
1933	368	986

In rebuilding the team for the 1934 campaign, the Cubs also have purchased two promising youngsters, Southpaw Pitcher Roy Joiner from Oakland and Second Baseman Augie Galan from San Francisco.

Pian Turns Down Offer for Bout

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Sam Pian, manager of Barney Ross, lightweight champion of the world, said last night he had refused an offer of $10,000 to meet the winner of next Monday's Eddie Cool-Frankie Klick bout in Philadelphia in a title contest there Christmas night because he considered the offer too small.

The bout was wanted by Fried and Fishman, Philadelphia promoters.

DUKES CLOSE FOR MIAMI CONTEST

MIAMI, Fla., Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Completion of definite arrangemnets for a post-season football game here New Year's Day between the University of Miami and Duquesne University of Pittsburgh, was announced today by T. E. Price, chairman of an arrangements committee.

Price said he had talked by telephone today with Elmer Layden, coach at Duquesne, and that terms for the game were agreed to. Although no official announcement was made, it was understood Duquesne has been given a $3,500 guaranty.

Gates to Retire As P. G. A. Leader

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Albert R. Gates, of Chicago, will retire as business administrator of the Professional Golfers' Association of America next January 1 and become legal counsel for the organization, it was announced today.

Economic conditions were given as the reason for the withdrawal of Gates from the office as business administrator, which position will be abolished.

The Chicago office of the P. G. A. will be kept open, although the staff probably will be reduced.

Election of officers was slated for today's concluding session of the association's annual convention, and prospects were that George Jacobus, of Ridgewood, N. J., would be re-elected to the presidency.

Huskers to Play Oregon Staters Turkey Day

LINCOLN, Neb., Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Coach Dana X. Bible, of the University of Nebraska, last night announced arrangements had been concluded for a football game between the Cornhuskers and the Oregon State College eleven Thanksgiving Day.

The Oregon team, en route home from its victory over Fordham Saturday in New York, will stop over in Lincoln to meet Nebraska. Bible said long distance telephone conversations with Oregon State officials in Chicago, where the team arrived yesterday, and at Corvallis, had led to a reconsideration of its decision not to engage the Cornhuskers on the current trip.

GAMES CARDED FOR '34, '35 CAMPAIGNS

By JESS CARVER

Graduate Manager Buddy Overend, of Carnegie Tech, and Athletic Director Elmer Layden and Graduate Manager John Holohan, of Duquesne, emerged from a huddle today and forthwith announced that they'd compled an agreement whereby the Tartans and Dukes will inaugurate a two-year football series.

The first game will be played next November 17 and the second at a date to be selected later in 1935. Both contests will be played at the Pitt Stadium.

The chances are that the series will be extended past 1935. If this occurs, and with the Dukes back on the Pitt schedule year after next, the long awaited three-cornered series for the city football championship will be a reality.

TEAMS PLAY TIE

Carnegie and Duquesne have met on the gridiron once before, clashing in a charity game here in 1931. The result of that meeting was a scoreless tie.

The Panthers signed the Dukes to a two-year contract the same year, meeting them in '32 and this fall. Pitt won both games, taking the first 33 to 0, and the one two weeks ago, 7 to 0. The Dukes have set themselves up as deserving of major ranking, and by taking their place on the Tartan schedule will assure themselves of further opportunity of gaining more prestige.

With the Carnegie-Duquesne contest certain for next fall, Pittsburgh gridiron fans may look forward to one of the most brilliant schedules ever presented. In addition to the Tech-Duke game, there will be the Pitt-Tech battle; the Pitt - Minnesota, Pitt - Southern California and Pitt-Notre Dame games here; the Tech-Purdue and Duquesne-West Virginia battles on the local agenda.

Meanwhile, the Plaid and Dukes went about preparations for their important contests scheduled for Saturday. The Tartans must invade the East again to meet New York University in the Yankee Stadium. The Dukes will be at home to Geneva's Covenanters, who, incidentally, will meet Tech here next fall.

So impressed and pleased was Coach Harpster, of the Plaid, with the work of young Charlet Spisak at quarterback in the games with Michigan State and Georgetown, that he definitely has decided to promote him to the varsity position.

The Tartans will depart for New York tomorrow night.

PITT AT WORK

Pitt's Panthers, who have been resting since their hard-won triumph over Nebraska last Saturday, will start preparations for the annual battle with Carnegie Tech this afternoon. The game, transfered this year to Thanksgiving Day, will get under way at 2 o'clock in the afternoon instead of 11 in the morning as was first planned.

Invitations were sent out to more than 400 high schools in the tri-state district last night for the University of Pittsburgh's fourth annual basketball clinic to be held in Pitt Stadium Saturday, December 9.

Dr. Red Carlson, Panther floor coach, said he expects the attendance will exceed the turnout of approximately 2,000 which attended last year's meeting. All high school coaches have been invited.

VIOLETS CHECK PASSES

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Howard Cann sent his New York University eleven through a two-hour drill yesterday, stressing defense against Carnegie Tech's forward passing attack as portrayed by the third team. The two teams will meet at the Yankee Stadium Saturday.

After the varsity had showed itself able to cope with the aerial attack, Coach Cann put his first stringers on the offensive, using the same lineup as played against Rutgers last week. With Smith, Siegel, Abee and Machlowitz in the backfield, the varsity paraded through the reserves, mixing passes with end runs.

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE CITY OF DREAD—The Island of Stromboli, the northernmost of the Lipari groups of islands, is famous as the home of the active volcano of the same name. It is said that this volcano never had a day of rest in the last 3,000 years. I passed the island at night. The cone was belching fire and smoke like some giant forge. But, huddled to the slopes of the volcano, I saw the villiage of San Vincenzo (Cuntrata di Vincienzu), whose 600 inhabitants must live under the constant menace of the mountain. Stromboli explodes at intervals with showers of red hot stones and lava. There is a constant thunderlike rumbling within. Yet the inhabitants cling with a strange love to their home of terror, which is very beautiful in its green cloak of vine and olives reaching almost to the crater. THE SACRED "BELIEVE IT OR NOT"—The Koran is the Bible of the Mohammedans. Part 15, Chapter 17, Section 12, verse 107, begins with the words, "Say, believe in it or believe not in it." This sura 'chapter' is considered one of the most sacred in the Koran, and it is deemed very meritorious to learn to recite it by heart.

LOCAL COMBINE PRESSES FOR THIRD PLACE

BULLETIN.

With no sprints to enliven the steady grind, there were no changes in positions of teams from 8 a. m. to 1 p. m. today in the seven-day ice skating marathon at Duquesne Garden.

Speeding along in fine form, the New York team of Bobby Lamb and Al Krux continued to maintain a decided advantage in the seven-day ice skating marathon at Duquesne Garden. At 8 o'clock this morning, the New Yorkers held a lead of 295 points over the Boston team of Tony Bernard and George Streun.

The teams have covered 4,798 laps and 477 miles.

Pittsburgh's combination of Chick Ake and Leonard Cleveland won a special mike sprint last night to boost its point total to the 590 mark, just 50 points under that of the third place team from Detroit.

Billy Minster, youngster from Windsor, skated 10 consecutive hours last night for a new iron man act. He returned to the ice at 4 o'clock this morning and still was skating at 8.

The standing of the teams:

Local Scholastic Stars Impress Harpster

By Howard Harpster

Carnegie Tech Football Coach, All-America Quarterback, 1928

Judging from the number of favorable reports I have received from scholastic fans throughout Western Pennsylvania, this district is rich in promising material for future college teams.

This especially is true in the City High School League, which recently completed its season with Peabody High School winning its first championship in a major sport by defeating South Hills in a post-season game at Forbes Field.

I was surprised by the reports I received regarding football players of promise in the City League. Many of these revealed the fact that this year's crop of local players was the best ever developed hereabouts.

SOUTH BOASTS STARS

From what I learned, South High School had one of the best football teams in the city, despite the fact that it failed to win the title. Two boys who have been brought to my attention as future college stars are John Grad, a triple-threat fullback, and Eddie Spotovich, an end, who was rated with the best in the district. They tell me Grad can do everything required of an ideal football player.

Howard Harpster

South Hills, which lost in a post-season game with Peabody for the city title, also included in its lineup some great performers in Schindler and Maren, ends; MacDonald, quarterback; Fowle, halfback, and Devlin, fullback.

Perry High, which went through its second season undefeated, had another fine team. This boy Kornick at quarterback must be a great football star. In discussing local football, Kornick's name invariably was brought up. They tell me he is an all-round southpaw. He kicks with his left foot, throws passes with his left hand and carries the ball in his left hand.

KORNICK HIGHLY TOUTED

Kornick was not the only boy to stand out for Perry. Siefert at center, McClain at tackle and Hieber, a shifty halfback, also came in for a lot of coment.

Peabody likewise produced some scintillating stars in Roberts, a Negro halfback, who, from what I hear, never was stopped; a fine end in Latterman, a good guard in Sunseri and an exceptionally good tackle in Willis.

The other teams in the local school race also presented some good players. Westinghouse has Giglotti, Barone, Cupps and Monaca; Fifth Avenue a boy by the name of Breverman; Schenley, Patrich, Brien and Quailey; Langley, Hunkele, Muir and Dignan; Carrick, Bombe, Nath, Hoffman, Greenwald and Schmitt, and Allderdice, Webb, Belie and Ichenko.

FINE YEAR FOR SCHOOL BOYS

Schools in the outlying districts were not without stars. Among the boys who were brought to my attention were Danton Dalletezze, of Jeannette; Kominic, of New Castle; Perricelli and Michelosen, of Ambridge; Andreko, of Scott High; Stapulis, of California, and others too numerous to mention.

It certainly has been a fine year for the school boys.

Clairton Captures Junior Grid Title

CLAIRTON, Pa., Nov. 22—Scoring in the second period, the Clairton Junior High School football team defeated McKeesport Junior High School, 6 to 0, here yesterday to clinch the W. P. I. A. L. junior title.

After a sustained drive of 60 yards, led by Lasch and Sears, the former plunged over from the seven-yard stripe for the only touchdown of the game. The lineup:

Clairton—6.		McKeesport—0.
Cannon	L. E.	Gibbons
Winklevoss	L. T.	Grommo
Mesko	L. G.	Lenardo
Turner	C.	Simpson
Abrams	R. G.	Ingels
Ballard	R. T.	Ben
Chametz	R. E.	Dashosky
Julian	Q.	Jackomas
Fletcher	L. H.	Forkovich
Lesch	R. H.	Labowitz
Sears	F.	Lanns

Score by quarters:

Clairton Junior High.	0	6	0	0	—6

HALL TO HEAD NET BODY

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—With only one new name on a ballot composed of members of the "old guard," Walter Merrill Hall, of New York City, has been named for the presidency of the United States Lawn Tennis Association for 1934 in the report of the nominating committee. Nomination is tantamount to election at the annual meeting in Pittsburgh, February 10.

Hall, who will succeed Harry S. Knox, former Chicagoan, now of Hoquiam, Wash., heads a ticket that includes Ralph W. Westcott, of Chicago, for secretary; Lawrence A. Baker, of Washington, D. C., treasurer, and Holcombe Ward, of New York, and Joseph W. Ivy, of Kansas City, for re-election as first and second vice presidents, respectively. Westcott is the only new officer on the list.

SPORT VIGNETTES

Escaping death in a mine disaster in Illinois nine years ago, when he and his father were the last to be taken out alive, Gino Garibaldi, born Rinaldi in Italy, took to professional wrestling and now ranks as one of the leaders and tops the revival card against Vanka Zelezniak, the Russian, in Motor Square Garden tomorrow night . . . He had been an amateur wrestler in Italy, where he worked as a blacksmith, so that the leap into the grappling sport as a profession was not unusual . . . His progress was slow until he took the name of the great Italian liberator, and then he became the idol of his fellow-countrymen . . . He is a good showman, as he has demonstrated in previous exhibitions here.

Tommy Loughran will give away seven years in age, 75 or more pounds in weight and seven inches in height when he meets the new young giant of the ring, Ray Impellitiere, in New York, tonight, but the Philadelphia boxing master is accustomed to doing that. . . . He has been in with Vittorio Campolo, Isadoro Gastanaga, Walter Cobb, Max Baer and other big fellows and has more than held his own. . . . He admits to being 31 years old and has spent half of those years in the ring.

When the A. A. U. at its convention here voted to go on the metric standard in track and field athletics it became the forty-seventh nation to so declare itself . . . This, despite the protests of Dink Templeton and some other coaches, was the only course open for adoption if this country wished to remain in the swim . . . The adoption of the ultimatum to Germany relating to the participation and protection of Jewish contestants in the Olympic games also was a natural procedure under the circumstances . . . The newest wrinkle is the suggestion of Jake Atz, veteran minor league manager, that parimutuel betting be conducted at baseball games to get the clubs out of the red . . . His plan is to have tickets sold on the daily batting performances of the players . . . The payoff would be made on the big hitters and a fellow with a weak average across the season would pay large dividends any day he happened to be "on," the same as a long shot at the race track . . . Favorites such as Babe Ruth would get a big play and would pay comparatively small returns . . . But woe betide the official scorer whose duty it would be to decide between hits and errors.

Myer Saul, former local sports scribe, now a prominent Atlantic Citian, is plotting a finish match for the seashore resort between Jim Londos and Jim Browning, to be held in the 48,000 capacity Convention Hall with the unquestioned world wrestling championship at stake . . . Browning already has accepted and is willing to wrestle on a winner-take-all basis if necessary . . . They are betting as high as 4 to 1 on the Army to take Navy in their thirty-fourth gridiron meeting in Philadelphia Saturday, thereby setting the stage for a big upset of the dope (it seldom fails) . . . Army has won 18 games, lost 12 and tied three in the series to date.

Imagine the embarrassment of Pitt when its football program last Saturday showed that the game with Carnegie Tech on Thanksgiving Day will be played at 11 a. m., causing a lot of telephone calls . . . The kickoff will be at 2 o'clock, as usual . . . You'd be surprised to know how much Hilary Wertz has gone back as a bowler . . . On February 7, 1927 (he even remembers the date), he bowled a 300 score in duckpins on the Hollywood Alleys in Dormont, and, night before last, all he could do was 299 on the Strand Alleys in Oakland, where he is boss . . . He had a lot of friends on hand to show 'em how hot he is on the maple ways—and was his face red when he missed that last pin, even if he was rolling against 1/2-inch rubber band sticks instead of the easy 5/8-inch band pins with which all of those perfect scores are being made.

As W. W. would Winchell it, an orchid to Carnegie Tech for placing Duquesne University on its football schedule for the next two seasons . . . With the Pitt-Duquesne rivalry off, after two years, no greater local "natural" could have been negotiated . . . It's a very popular move.—HARRY KECK.

UNIFORM CODE, P. G. A. PLAN

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Working in unison again after the stormiest year since its organization, the Professional Golfers' Association of America has decided to automatically qualify all Ryder Cup players for the P. G. A. golf championships and to establish a mandatory set of teaching rules.

The proposal to allow automatic qualification in the P. G. A. championships to Ryder Cup players came after a revolt threatened to break up the organization. Last September, several Ryder Cup players, campaigning for the cup and exhibition money in England, insisted on automatic qualification. At first, it was refused, but later, as the storm increased and star players threatened to withdraw, the demand was granted.

The adoption of a uniform set of teaching rules, one of the most progressive ideas ever advanced, was urged by President Jacobus with an aim to clear up conflicting methods of instruction and to center on one nationally accepted course. Under the plan, each professional and amateur golfer will be asked to submit his idea of the "perfect way to teach golf" to sectional and local boards. These boards, assisted by a physician, will draft a course and submit it to a natoinal board.

The national board then will pick what appears to be the best and surest method of golf instruction and make it compulsory to follow the method or quit the P. G. A.

JEWISH ISSUE DECISION DELAYED

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Protest against passage of a resolution by the American Olympic Association threatening withdrawal of the United States team from the 1936 games at Berlin was voiced today by Brig. Gen. Charles H. Sherrill at the quadrennial meeting.

Gen. Sherrill, American member of the International Olympic Committee, declared the resolution would do more harm than good in Germany and elsewhere and suggested that it be amended to make it merely a protest.

The resolution, presented by Gustavus Kirby, of New York, was identical with that almost unanimously adopted by the Amateur Athletic Union at its national convention in Pittsburgh Monday.

The vote on the resolution was postponed on motion of Murray Hulbert, of New York, former A. A. U. president, and the entire question referred to a committee of which Kirby and Sherrill were made members.

Following Sherrill's protest against the resolution in its present form, Charles L. Ornstein, representative of the Jewish Welfare Board, demanded that the association either take positive action or none at all.

Ornstein presented a list of 40 alleged examples of Nazi discrimination against Jewish athletes since the Vienna meeting.

Meeting Ends

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Delegates from all sections of the United States to the convention of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States have departed from Pittsburgh today, but they left the memory of one of the most exciting conclaves the organization has held since it inaugurated its yearly meetings 45 years ago.

The pressure of important business caused the closing sessions yesterday to run well into the night. As a result those delegates selected to attend to meeting of the American Olympic Committee at Washington today had to hustle to their train as quickly as the sessions adjourned.

BRUNDAGE STAYS

The election of Avery Brundage to succeed himself, which was a formality, occurred just before the conclave ended. The officers re-elected with Brundage for another term were, Daniel J. Ferris, secretary-treasurer; J. L. Bingham, of Chicago, assistant to the president, and the four vice presidents, Martin A. Klein, of New York; Al Sandell, of San Francisco; John J. Magee, of Brunswick, Maine, and Jack Rafferty, of Houston, Texas.

The voluminous report of the important legislation committee, a dry proceeding lasting several hours, threw off some sparks when an attempt was made to insert an amendment to the boxing rules which would have allowed more leeway on the awards given boxers.

The proposal of Vice President Martin Klein precipitated the fight on boxing. Klein, a member of the Metropolitan Association, was in favor of giving the contestants something more practical than medals and that sort of thing; he and his supporters thought it would be more in keeping with charity to give a boy an order for a pair of shoes or some groceries in cases where the recipient was tinged with poverty.

But the majority of the delegates favored the present plan which permits the lads to "die-for-dear-old Rutgers," in a manner speaking.

FACEY FAVORS ORDERS

Frank J. Facey, a highly interesting delegate from Boston, remarked that he had seen boys wearing medals and carrying watches who had no overcoats and scarcely any shoes. Like Klein, Facey thought something should be done to correct such a condition. He pointed out that the boxers, as a rule, would sell or pawn their watches and inferred it would be much more honorable to give them orders for merchandise.

The arguments for and against the Klein proposal reached a climax when L. di Benedetto, of New Orleans, shouted that the A. A. U. should throw out boxing entirely. The New Orleans delegate said that conditions in the organization concerning the mitt game were so near the borderline of professionalism that the association suffered loss of prestige in assuming responsibility for the sport. In the end the backers of the movement to restrict the prizes to medals and jewelry won out.

An answer from the German Olympic Committee to the resolution passed yesterday by the A. A. U., which condemned discrimination in Germany against German Jewish athletes, was accepted without comment at the closing sessions.

METRIC SYSTEM APPROVED

The metric system of measurement was approved by the convention proper without a dissenting vote. The Metropolitan and New England associations had opposed retention of the international standard, but when the matter reached the floor through the legislation committee it met with no foes.

No additional awards of championship events beyond those announced Sunday by the various committees were made by the convention. Several important events, including the outdoor swimming and track and field events, were left open.

In the late minutes of the closing session the convention passed a resolution, addressed to President Roosevelt, asking that sports projects such as playgrounds, athletic fields, swimming pools, et cetera, be considered in allotting monies to public works and unemployment.

Anderson Given Confidence Vote By Jones

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Before Southern California's football team departed for South Bend yesterday, Coach Howard Jones cast a sincere vote of confidence in Notre Dame and its grid mentor, Hunk Anderson. He said:

"If you want my honest opinion, that game Saturday will make or break us so far as our remaining contest with Georgia and Washington are concerned.

"My scouts tell me the Ramblers have a lot better team than the scores have indicated. Notre Dame has a big, rugged team, which at anytime is apt to become one of its old-time elevens again."

He feels that those who have taken it upon themselves to criticize Anderson for Notre Dame's unfortunate season have failed to recognize that material of high caliber is one of the first requisites of a great team.

TEXAS REGATTA HEARST MEET

Universal Service.

SAN ANTONIO, Tex., Nov. 22.—The outboard motorboat stars of the entire nation, from California to Florida and as far North as Chicago, have been invited to compete in the biggest mid-winter racing carnival ever arranged, the William Randolph Hearst trophy regatta. The dates were announced today as Sunday, December 31, and Monday, January 1, at Lake McQueeney, within half an hour's drive of downtown San Antonio.

The regatta is being sponsored jointly by the Texas Boat Club, Inc., an organization of 400 members with headquarters in San Antonio, and the San Antonio Light, published by William Randolph Hearst.

The Texas Boat Club, which has boomed outboard racing in the Southwest until it is one of the leading sports, with thousands of followers, has put $1,000 in escrow with The Light to guarantee purses for the two-day mid-winter meet which will be devided into six events, each to be run in two heats, one December 31 and the other January 1.

In addition to the prize money and the three-feet-high Hearst championship trophy, which will be patterned along the lines of the trophies Mr. Hearst gave for the grand championships in the recent World Fair regatta at Chicago and the Los Angeles regatta, there will be six handsome trophies for the winners of each class.

LACROSSE LOOP MEETS HERE

By HARRY KECK

Sports Editor.

A meeting will be held here next Sunday afternoon by the National Lacrosse League, of which Pittsburgh is a new member, it was announced today by Larry Welch, of Buffalo, who will direct the local club, which will play its games in Motor Square Garden.

The National League is the eastern unit of the North American Professional Lacrosse Association, with headquarters in Buffalo. The western group is known as the American League. Making up the two circuits will be Chicago, Toronto, St. Louis, Milwaukee, Rochester and possibly Detroit, in addition to Pittsburgh.

A schedule of 24 games at home and an equal number away is planned for the local team, which will be known as the Yellow Jackets, and, if Sunday games are permitted, the season will be opened on December 10; if not, on Tuesday, December 12.

The local team will be drafted from the personnel of the Montreal Canadiens, for the last two years world professional lacrosse champions, it was said, with Suds Sutherland, of Ottawa, acting as coach.

Lacrosse is an old Indian game and the Canadiens all are Indians or French-Canadians. Seven-men teams will be used in the league games, with squads limited to 12.

LOCAL PLAYERS MAKE RATINGS

Will Pittsburgh have an All-America football player this fall?

That's a thought for the entrants in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph's All-America Team contest to ponder.

The team will be selected by the All-America Board of Football from the list of players who make the weekly All-America Ratings which appear exclusively in the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph each Saturday.

So far—with several weeks to go—four names of Pittsburgh players have made their appearance on the scroll. Three of them are Pitt backs—Sebastian, O'Dell and Weinstock. The other is that amazing guard of Carnegie Tech—Bunny Burzio.

Contestants are asked to withhold their selections until after the last of the Ratings appear, on December 9. The team will be published on December 16. Blanks to be filled out will be printed to facilitate the replies.

Zivic Brothers Busy on Coast

Eddie and Fritzie Zivic, local boxers, are booked for more bouts in California, where they have been campaigning for more than a month. Fritzie meets Jimmy Torres in one of two four-round feature bouts at Pasadena tomorrow night, with Star Frisco and Chat Laredo in the other number, and he also boxes at Pico, Cal., next Monday and at San Francisco on December 8.

Eddie meets Rito Martinez in a four-rounder at Hollywood, December 1, with Fritzie also on the card against an opponent to be selected, and Eddie also will be on the 'Frisco bill a week later.

Manager Luke Carney has declined a 10-round windup for Fritzie with Henry Woods at Seattle.

Neusel Stops Poreda In Tenth Round

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—A fat and apparently out-of-condition Stanley Poreda, of Jersey City, was knocked out by Walter Neusel, the new "Max Schmeling," of Germany, in the final round of a 10-round bout here last night. A right to the jaw ended the bout, which Neusel had won all of the way.

It was Neusel's second straight knockout in this country. A few weeks ago he stopped Les Kennedy, of California, here.

Fight Results

TEN SANDLOT TEAMS ARE UNBEATEN

By TOM BIRKS

The list of undefeated teams in the various sandlot football leagues in this district is dwindling rapidly. Although 10 teams in the district can lay claim to undefeated records, there is every reason to believe that when the season closes in two weeks' time, many of the unbeaten outfits will be numbered among the defeated.

In Section I, of the Inter-County League, there are two undefeated elevens. This is the only league with two teams undefeated. The pair, the McKeesport Crimsons and the McKeesport Unions, will meet next Sunday and it is likely that one of them will lose its mark.

Rox Rangers have clinched the title in the Lightweight Conference and also are undefeated, which is nothing new for the Roxians. This is the third season that Toby Uansa has turned out an undefeated team.

In Section II, of the Inter-County League, Trafford, coached by Bull Boyer, former McKeesport Olympic star, is still unbeaten, as is the Creighton eleven of the Allegheny Valley League. Sandlot fans up the Allegheny River claim that Creighton is one of the finest sandlot teams ever banded together.

In Section IV, of the Division A teams, Aliquippa has yet to be defeated, and Max Carey's Brighton team is in the same category.

In the City Junior League, the G. A. Streibs still have an unbeaten certificate, as does the St. Rosalia Prep in Section I of the Junior League. The Shady Side Locklins are setting a new record with 11 straight victories.

The tenth undefeated team is the Twenty-third Ward Republican Club.

Punts and Passes

Coach Jack Farwell is working wonders with the American Legion Post 365 team in Troy Hill. The Troy Hill aggregation formerly was known as the Cronenweth eleven.

Eddie Pacey, quarterback of the Strip Ramblers, has been in every game for the Strip aggregation this season. There is a reason for this. Eddie is the only quarterback the club owns. Jimmy Kelly coaches the club.

Squash Racquets Tourney on Friday

Ben Pope, professional squash racquets player, announced today that a one-day all-star squash tournament will be held at the Keystone Athletic Club Friday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. Dr. David O'Loughlin is the only outside entrant.

F. S. White, former national single champion, may play in the exhibitions doubles match. If White should fail to make an appearance Ben Pope will be paired with G. C. Kennedy against J. O. Craig and D. J. Kennedy. The pairings for the singles matches: W. McCook Reed vs. W. D. Bickel; J. K. Ebbert vs. C. A. Fagan; E. E. Seifer vs. J. W. Oliver; L. S. Semans vs. Dr. David O'Loughlin.

Arnold School Banquet Saturday

The annual football dinner of Arnold School will be held at the school on Saturday. The dinner will be followed by a dance in the Robert E. Withers Gymnasium, to which Arnold students and alumni are invited.

Army-Navy Game Sellout Expected

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 22.—(INS.)—Franklin Field officials today announced they expected a complete sellout for the Army-Navy game Saturday. Advance orders indicate every one of the 78,000 seats will be filled when the whistle blows at the start of the gridiron classic.

No preparations are being made to handle any more than the capacity attendance of Franklin Field.

MULDOON ESTATE BIG

W. Va. Scholastic Stars to Meet January 1

CHARLESTON, W. Va., Nov. 22.—(AP.)—The best high school football players in West Virginia, picked from this year's crop of stars, will meet in Charleston New Year's Day in the first North-South high school contest in state athletic history.

The game, the proceeds to go to charity, became a certainty when approval was given by the state board of appeals of the High School Athletic Association.

The southern boys will meet at Charleston the same day and will be trained by Albert (Big Sleepy) Glenn, Charleston head coach, and William Calvert, coach at East Bank.

Chillysauce

By Chilly Doyle

The romance that is Chuck Klein reached a Frank Merriwell climax yesterday as the poor but honest boy was purchased by the rich Chicago Cubs, in whose lineup he is apt to ride to even higher crests than he attained in Philadelphia.

While in reality it was about five years ago, it seems only a year or so since I was sitting in the Quaker dugout at Forbes Field with Manager Burt Shotton. Burt was chuckling inwardly over something that pleased him. He watched a young Hercules sock the ball in the batting practice as he remarked:

"How do you like that kid at the plate? His name is Chuck Klein and I just bought him for $2,500 by telephone."

And thus did Chuck jump from a horse-and-buggy circuit to big time in one leap. Moreover, he batted even better than he did in the tall and uncut. When Charles landed in the big tent his fielding was not so hot, but in the course of two years he blossomed into one of the great field defensive pasture guardians in the league.

Were Klein only a mediocre fielder he would be valuable on account of his powerhouse punch. Despite his great heft he can carry the mail a la Vaughan, and his throwing arm is comparable to the guns carried by Chick Hafey and Kiki Cuyler.

Galli Curci Grimm will have a colorful array in Chicago next summer now that Klein is assured of Cub toggery. In Klein, Cuyler, Babe Herman, Riggs Stephenson and Frank Demaree, the southpaw manager can offer a dazzle trio for outfield duty.

This season has shown more surprising upsets than any previous season. Few teams have been able to maintain enough consistent strength to win every game. This is because of playing tougher schedules, and because there are many high-class teams playing about an equal brand of football.

Pop Warner

Another reason is because the luck and breaks of the game are the determining factors in many close plays. The best team does not always win, as has been demonstrated in many contests.

Many games result in punting duels, with occasional passes, because of the inability of running plays to cope with the defense. Blocked kicks and fumbled punts often determine the winner, while completed long, lucky passes or the interception of passes spell victory or defeat in many a close battle.

BEST TEAM SHOULD WIN

In any athletic contest I believe the rules should be such that the best man or the best team will be victorious in the great majority of contests. In gridiron contests it often happens that a team making a dozen or more first downs to the other team's one or two, and thereby showing a distinct superiority in attack, is beaten by the weaker team scoring a lucky touchdown. Scoring a point for each first down would remedy this weakness in the present scoring methods. It would add many thrills to the game. It would encourage the development and use of a better running attack and materially lessen the number of tie games. There are many arguments in favor, and not a single logical argument against such a change in scoring.

RESULTS CHANGED

If the point per first down method of scoring had been used last Saturday, and the games had been played just as they were, Georgia Tech would have defeated Alabama, 24 to 18, Brown would have won from Harvard, 20 to 19, and Minnesota would have been victorious over Michigan, 7 to 5. However, if those teams had been playing under that method of scoring their strategy would have been different and there is no way of knowing what the results might have been.

Much has been written in the last few weeks about new defense and new offensive plays that have been introduced this year or the year before. Evidently these articles have been prepared by young coaches or newspaper men without much knowledge of what has happened in the past. Nothing new appears in football. It is some old play or defense with another name.

The older coaches were much amused last week over one article that claimed that the new 6-2-2-1 defense as originated by the coast teams this year would revolutionize the game.

John Heisman at Georgia Tech used the 6-2-2-1 defense very effectively in 1916 in a game between Georgia Tech and the University of Georgia. Buck O'Neil used this defense at Syracuse with telling effect in 1919-20-21. It is a safe bet that Fielding Yost or Alonso Stagg could recall using such defense in the gay 90's.

LATERAL NOT NEW

A good many coaches are claiming credit for the forward lateral that is so popular these days. One article had this play appearing for the first time only three years ago and went on to describe its use by Western Conference teams, as a new contribution to the game of football.

Bucknell scored two touchdowns against the Navy in 1922 with this play. I had thought that Pete Reynolds, the Bucknell coach, was the originator but I understand from a scout that he saw the play several years prior to 1922.

Football play has become so standardized in the past few years that a few of the old plays and formations create a sensasation when reintroduced into a game. Ninety-five per cent of our modern teams play a balanced line with the backs shifted to one side, Notre Dame style or an unbalanced line with a wing back flanking the tackle, Warner style or punt formation, Michigan style.

It is easy for a good smart team to learn the defense for these three formations, and as they meet one of the three for week after week, the defense has become proficient in stopping the offense.

SEES NEW STYLES

Look for some of the old time spread formations next season unless the rules committee does something to help the offense. The stunning upset in the South this past week was Auburn's win over the Red Raiders from Georgia University, 14 to 6. Kimball, the speedy Auburn half, played havoc with Georgia's great record of seven wins and no losses.

Alabama and Louisiana State University are undefeated in the Southeastern Conference and Duke reigns supreme in the Southern.

Alabama will come through undefeated, as they have too much power for Vandy on Thanksgiving Day. L. S. U. will have trouble with Tulane, who defeated Kentucky, a good team, 33 to 0 this past Saturday. It looks like Alabama and Duke for the championship this year. Probably the best game in the South this past week was the Alabama-Georgia Tech game. This game contained everything that makes football interesting and Alabama was fortunate to win, 12 to 9.

Georgia Tech, with her newfound power, should defeat her rival, the University of Georgia, next Saturday. In the Southwest Centenary and Texas Christian University again proved their class, Centenary downing Southern Methodist, 7 to 0, and Texas Christian University swamping Texas, 30 to 0.

Presnell, Strong Share Scoring Lead

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—(AP.)—Glen Presnell, former Nebraska backfield ace now with the Portsmouth Spartans, has tied Ken Strong, of the New York Giants, for individual scoring honors in the National Professional Football League.

Strong, who made his football reputation at New York University, booted the field goal that beat the Chicago Bears last Sunday, but Presnell scored seven points to tie the New Yorker for the lead at 55 points apiece. Jim Musick, of Southern California and Boston, is third with 44, and Buckets Goldenberg, of Wisconsin and Green Bay, fourth with 42.

Cliff Battles, of West Virginia Wesleyan and Boston, leads in ground gaining with 695 yards against 564 for Musick and 419 for Presnell.

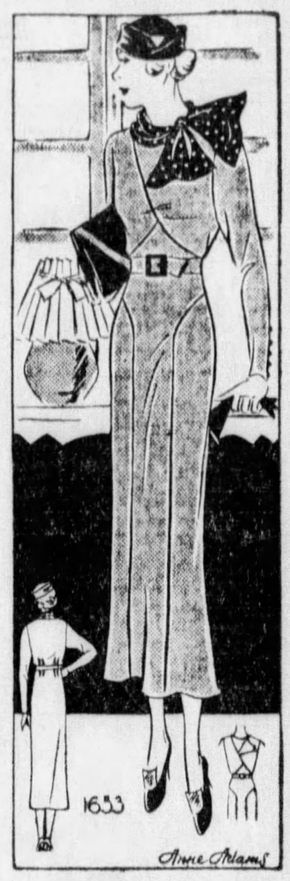
Necklines Create Interest

Pattern 1653

Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern



Designers have outdone themselves in the ingenious frocks they've created for you this season! There's elegance, color, diversity of detail and ample choice of fabric. This stunning model seems to combine all these points—the seaming is clever, and flatters the figure to slimness; the large casual scarf knotted close to the neck introduces that vital touch of contrast against the dullness of a new mossy crepe. It would be wise to have several scarfs—and then, as another change, wear the neckline open as shown in the small sketch.

Pattern 1653 is available in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 32, 34, 36, 38, 40 and 42. Size 16 takes 3⅜ yards 39 inch fabric and ¾ yard contrasting. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Forbes

President Has One Priceless Characteristic

By B. C. FORBES

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT has one quality, one characteristic, one possession which is priceless under existing foggy conditions: optimism, cheerfullness, faith.

Mr. Forbes

Never once has he exhibited (publicly) the slightest doubt in his ability, in the nation's ability, to lick depression and restore prosperity.

A pessimistic President would be a calamity these days. We need the Chief Executive who knows how to smile, who has inexhaustible self-reliance, who has unshakable confidence in America's ability to triumph.

If every business had at its head today an executive of similar unconquerable determination to overcome all obstacles, we would have made faster progress.

I once visited Hawaii. While I played golf with the governor, rain began to fall. Being a Scot, it didn't bother me, but I suggested to his excellency that perhaps he might want to quit. He asked:

"Why?"

I explained:

"The rain."

He replied:

"My dear sir, in Hawaii we regard and call rain 'liquid sunshine.—Look—"

He pointed toward the surrounding mountainsides, and lo, I saw something I had never before seen, namely, three distinct rainbows.

Somehow, Franklin D. Roosevelt's irrepressible cheerfulness reminds me of that incident and that scene. He never exhibits the slightest shadow of doubt that the sun will again shine and that all will be well with America.

'Tis said that every organization is but the lengthened shadow of one man. Do you not agree that it is incalculably important that the head of our nation is a man who radiates inspiration, faith, invulnerable confidence?

If he, with all the problems and difficulties pressing upon him, can consistently exhibit courage, surely it ill becomes the rest of us to wilt, to show the white feather, to give up.

One banker remarked to me:

"The government proposes to spend a dozen billions of dollars, one way or another, to drive away depression and to start the country marching forward. The whole trick could be turned as simply as A, B, C, by using not a dozen billions, but two or less."

I answered:

"Oh, yeah? So you, too, have a wonderful panacea? Shoot!"

He calmly replied:

"I have. It is so simple that nobody would dream of adopting it. All that would be necessary would be for the government to begin buying stocks.

"I'm convinced that it wouldn't take two billions, but nearer half-a-billion to start a real bull market. And you know as well as I do that a sustained advance in the stock market would do more than anything else to convince the country that the depression had ended and that we were definitely on the upward track.

"Higher security values would have not only a psychological effect, but would lead to the solving of almost all our other problems.

"Paying bounties to wheat and corn growers would add a billion or more to the purchasing power of farmers, but a bull market in stocks would run into many billions."

Of course, this banker's suggestion will be scorned.

It was remarked in this column that, while many elderly men of the old-school type are pessimistic and cannot see their way out of what they call the present all-pervading "fog," the majority of younger executives are full of vim, vigor and vision.

At a private dinner attended by leading Baltimore citizens, the host, A. B. Chivers of the Baltimore News, asked the mayor and others to make little talks which might be illuminating to this writer. One department store owner related that he had recently taken his son into the business, and added:

Instead of laying down the law to the young men as to how everything must be done, instead of ordering his son to accept unquestioningly his ideas, this business man is encouraging the youth to think for himself, to suggest innovations, to express his own mentality and personality.

Already the parent is inclined to believe that this method will yield worthwhile results. The son is giving evidence that he is en rapport with the new day, the new era.

Does it not behoove us all to adapt ourselves to this changed, changing world.

Remington-Rand Back on Orders

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 22.—(AP.)—William H. Matthews, of Buffalo, general manager of the typewriter division of the Remington-Rand Manufacturing Company, told a district salesmen's convention here that production of typewriters in the company's plants is running 5,000 a month behind orders.

He said there were indications $2,000,000 worth of machines would be ordered from Russia as soon as credit arrangements could be completed.

STOCK MARKET GIVES MIXED APPEARANCE

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Traders in stocks and staples, apparently placing varied interpretations on developments at Washington, moved cautiously in the markets today, and prices presented a rather mixed appearance.

With the domestic gold price unchanged at $33.76 an ounce, the dollar dipped and rallied in foreign exchange dealings, then settled down to a fairly steady range. Equities drooped in the first hour and came back to a narrow and generally dull routine. Grains were inclined to ease, while cotton and other commodities did little. United States government securities were heavy and active. Other bonds were irregular.

Metal shares, including United States Smelting, American Smelting, McIntyre Porcupine and Cerro De Pasco, regained popularity with gains of 1 to around 3 points. Others up fractionally to a point or more were Case, Consolidated Gas, Public Service of New Jersey, du Pont, Johns-Manville, Celanese and Texas Gulf. National Distillers, American Commercial Alcohol and Schenley were off 1 to 2 and some of the rails eased. American Telephone, American Can, United States Steel and other leaders were unchanged to slightly lower.

The resignation of Prof. O. M. W. Sprague, international monetary authority, as special adviser to the Treasury, was the principal topic of discussion in the street. The concensus seemed to be, however, that the retirement would have little effect on the administration's monetary policy, but probably would tend to consolidate the ranks of those who are for and against the gold price-fixing program.

Dr. Sprague's remark, in his letter of withdrawal, that "bonds, including government bonds, are an unsatisfactory investment at this time when a government is determined to depreciate its currency," while bringing expressions of approval and disapproval, at least served to draw the attention of brokerage houses more sharply to the movements of listed loans.

Federal bonds have been declining almost daily, but, dealers pointed out, little liquidation has been from banks and insurance companies. The selling was attributed largely to individuals, both here and abroad, and some corporations wishing to switch to equities as an inflationary hedge.

At the same time some bankers have been advising clients against attempting to transfer funds abroad in preference to investment at home. These financiers argue that debts of most foreign countries are proportionately much greater than those of America and the security, consequently, not so good. Also, they say, if the dollar should be stabilized on a gold base, there might be a tremendous capital repatriation which could cause serious losses in foreign currency deposits.

WHEAT TAKES RAPID DIP

CHICAGO, Nov. 22.—Wheat underwent a quick tumble of more than 2 cents a bushel early today. Uncertainties of monetary prospects were chief apparent influence, with traders' attention directed largely to disturbing effects of the resignation of O. M. W. Sprague from the United States Treasury Department. Opening 7/8@1 7/8 down, wheat afterward receded further. Corn started 1/8@7/8 off and subsequently showed additional setbacks.

Although rallies followed early breaks in wheat values, the recovery was limited for the time being to about 1 1/2 cents a bushed, and failed to hold well. Corn and oats prices derived relative firmness from export purchases of 34,000 bushels of yellow corn for Great Britain. Provisions went lower.

WORKS AWARDS AID STEEL OUTLOOK

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Iron Age says:

"While current steel bookings show a slight change for the better, the general market outlook has improved appreciably. Public works contracts are cutting a larger figure from a tonnage standpoint, rail buying is actually getting under way, and estimates of automobile production in December have been revised upward. While it is still uncertain how much these factors will affect iron and steel output between now and December 31, there is a growing belief that the production rate has been scraping bottom and that a rebound is due, possibly early in the new year.

"November assemblies of automobiles are not likely to exceed 55,000 units, but estimates of December production have been revised upward from 75,000 to 100,000 cars. Output is expected to take a sharp upturn in January. Retail stocks of automobiles have been virtually wiped out, insuring a considerable backlog of orders for replacements alone.

"A surprising development in connection with rail purchases is the decision of a considerable number of railroads to buy their requirements with their own funds. In all, close to 300,000 tons may be bought in this manner. Applications for government loans for rail purchases thus far received cover about 500,000 tons.

"The steel ingot production schedule announced on Monday was 26.9 per cent, a slight decline from the rate of 27.1 reported at the beginning of the previous week. Current reports of operations assembled by the Iron Age reflect a gain rather than a loss. As against an estimated rate of 26 per cent a week ago, the present average is 27.5 per cent and, according to present indications, may reach 28 per cent before the close of the week.

"The Iron Age composite for heavy melting scrap has declined from $10 to $9.83 a gross ton. The finished steel and pig iron composites are unchanged at 2.015c a pound and $16.61 a ton respectively."

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—The price of tin plate has been increased $12 a ton under a new schedule filed by manufacturers with the American Iron and Steel Institute, which is administering the steel industry's code of fair competition. Other advances reported affect various lines of tubes, which have been raised from $4 to $6 a ton.

POWER OUTPUT GAIN LESS

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—Production of electricity by the electric light and power industry of the United States during the week ended November 18 totaled 1,617,249,000 kwh compared to 1,531,584,000 kwh in the like week in 1932, an increase of 5.6 per cent according to the Edison Electric Institute. Output in the week ended November 11 came to 1,616,875,000 kwh, a gain of 6.3 per cent over a year ago, and in the week ended November 4 showed an increase of 3.8 per cent over the similar 1932 period.

Payments to Closed Bank Depositors Get Start

By GEORGE H. SNYDER

OUTSTANDING AMONG the efforts of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation has been the progress made in liberating deposits in closed banks.

The R. F. C. has been aiding in bank liquidation for some time but a month ago a plan was launched for intensive effort to employ its credit to get frozen bank deposits back into circulation.

The payment of $2,775,000 to 13,400 depositors of the Bank of Pittsburgh in the form of a 10 per cent distribution represents part of this type of activity.

* * *

Payments Reach Large Figures

AS A RESULT of this intensified program, the corporation has disbursed $71,000,000 directly to depositors of closed banks. This is not the total of authorizations, but represents actual cash payments.

In announcing the total payments to closed banks, Chairman Jones of the R. F. C. expressed the hope that within the next few months $1,000,000,000 might be placed in the hands of depositors.

Under the plan, the closed banks turn over their sound but as yet uncollected assets to the R. F. C. and are granted loans in return. This system makes possible the payment of disbursements to depositors several months previous to the time when such payments ordinarily would be made.

To Take Home Owners Bonds

WHILE THE STATUS of bonds of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation was in doubt for some time, Many closed banks are negotiating to have the Reconstruction Finance Corporation take over these securities as parts of the assets of closed banks. This is adding to the liquidity of many institutions.

In most cases, according to Jones, these obligations of the Home Owners' Loan Corporation are being accepted at 80 per cent of their face value for loaning purposes without additional security.

The Girl Who Won

By MAY CHRISTIE

CHAPTER XXXVIII.

It was 6 o'clock. Rhoda had spent a boring afternoon with Mrs. Judson.

It wasn't for this kind of tete-a-tete she had come here. Oh, no! It was because she hoped to captivate Tony O'Brien.

He'd told her in New York about his fishing trip, and about a little shack he'd stopped at once or twice before, not far from the ranch of Jinny Judson.

So Rhoda had wangled the invitation to come here for a week, hoping to further matters with him.

But things hadn't progressed last night the way she'd thought they would. Tony had shown none of his old-time symptoms of attraction.

Was there someone else who had stepped into the susceptible heart of the young Irishman?

NOT surely that little secretary person?

But why had he forsaken Rhoda to follow HER out to the kitchen?

What kind of an "affaire" was going on? Rhoda had the sort of mind that invariably jumps to the worst conclusion.

The girl was out this afternoon. Was SHE with him?

RHODA CONTEMPUOUS

Mrs. Judson had been reticent about this girl. When Rhoda had tried to pump her, she had volunteered but little information.

"He's only fooling her along," thought Rhoda Vane. She isn't in his class. And he's indebted to ME for all those clients I have sent him!"

Here was a trump card. She'd harp on this. Make him feel in her debt and show him she could do a whole lot for him.

"He's only fooling and flirting with her, of course," repeated Rhoda inwardly as the "simply marvelous" figure she was so proud of was kneaded and moulded by Yvonne.

This daily massage was quite necessary, because not only was Rhoda naturally lazy and hated exercise, but she indulged freely in cocktails and other forms of alcoholic stimulants.

THINKS OF MARRIAGE

She declined, however, to believe that with a mere secretary or whatever menial position the girl held, Tony could possibly be serious.

"He has his way to make. He'd never dream of marrying her. He's clever and ambitious."

MARRIAGE was in Rhoda's mind today. She'd had no luck in that line on the Riviera.

She's had "offers," it is true. But scarcely of an "honorable" kind . . . although two gigolos, in turn, had suggested they'd be quite willing to step up to the altar with her provided she would support them.

And Tony was well-born. There was Irish royalty among his ancestors.

Not that he ever spoke of that. He was a real American in his ideas. Democratic.

The main thing was that Tony was "persona grata" everywhere, and—once married to him—she would have much more of an "entrance."

Added to that, Tony's insouciance, good looks and charm had fascinated her.

She only had to encourage him a bit, she told herself, to have him where she wanted him.

"Rub harder, girl," she said to her maid, in French, out of the corner of her mouth where the mud-mask hadn't quite hardened.

"Madame is slim enough, I am sure—" But Yvonne was afraid of her new mistress and redoubled her efforts.

A PLEASANT VISION

WHY did lovers fall away? She attracted them so easily, but it seemed that she didn't hold them . . .

That was because she hadn't wanted to. Rhoda had a firm belief in her own powers of fascination.

"I can easily snaffle anyone I want." That was her credo.

But WAS it going to be so easy with this handsome Irishman?

With her money they would take a smart apartment on Park avenue, of course.

She'd push Tony on, and up. He would be a wonderful investment for her.

Because he was well-born, and charming, and handsome, and hard-working and ambitious.

"The young monsieur who was here last night, he ess in loff with that leetle Mees Nollie . . . "

Synopsis

Nollie Day, stenographer at an exclusive hotel, is befriended by wealthy Mrs. Judson, a widow. Nollie goes to a theater in place of Mrs. Judson, where she meets handsome Tony O'Brien. She reveals her own identity but Tony does not hear her. Next day, Tony telephones and learns Mrs. Judson has gone abroad. Nollie wants to clear her identity, but is unable to get in touch with Tony. Mrs. Judson returns and ask Nollie to become her secretary and visit her ranch. Nollie accompanies Mrs. Judson to a garden party and meets Rhoda Vane. Rhoda seems to dislike Nollie. Nollie and the widow leave for the ranch after inviting Rhoda. Nollie is surprised when she meets Tony near the ranch. Tony is pleased when she tells him she is not Mrs. Judson. Rhoda visits the ranch. She is rude to Nollie, but plainly tries to gain Tony's favor. Tony confesses that he loves Nollie.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Greater leniency is shown by the popular one while the other is strict.

Even though temporary illness results, this will not turn them away from the one who hands out candy and other sweets whenever they ask for it.

The seeds of chronic kidney and liver trouble and many other ailments are sown in youth and develop so gradually that it hardly seems possible to trace to these little illnesses of childhood.

The child's diet has much to do with the condition of health in middle or old age.

What difference should it make to you to have the child's good will when it surely will come to the place where your indulgence will be remembered and condemned.

Would you rather have: the little child's approval or the sincere thanks of the grown man or woman you brought up to eat regularly of the proper kind of food?

If you have a child with brains and pamper him to win popularity, the time will come when that child will say that you yourself did not have any brains.

PICTORIAL EDUCATION FOR SCHOOL PUPILS

GLADIATORS—SACRIFICES TO THE CRAVING FOR ENTERTAINMENT

Gladiators (gladius means sword) were trained slaves, prisoners (under Nero even knights and senators; under Domitian women also) who fought each other to death in the arena (circus). The conquered gladiator raised his right hand to beg for mercy. Clapping the hands by the hysterical crowd meant life, their thumbs down (as shown) the death blow.

This cruel custom probably was borrowed from the East, where human sacrifices in form of combat were offered at funerals. (World History-Customs)

WINTER AT VALLEY FORGE (1777-1778)

The British Gen. Howe, whose deviation from the concentric offensive was partly responsible for the surrender of Gen. Burgoyne (Oct. 7, 1777; see Pict. Ed. Nov. 10) fought his way to Philadelphia.

Washington had to retreat to Valley Forge, Pa., to pass the winter in camp. "For three days after their arrival they had no meat, during two of those days no bread." Washington, with his troops, endured unspeakable sufferings, mitigated by their loyalty for the great cause of liberation and by the good hopes fanned by the news of the French alliance, the approach of French ships with troops and gold. MILK (General Science)

A number of typical but widely different breeds of dairy cows have been developed in various countries. The best known five types of the United States are shown. Composition of their milk.

Breed	Water	Protein	Fat	Lactose	Ash	Total solids
	per cent	per cent	per cent	per cent	per cent	per cent
Jersey	85.27	3.80	5.14	5.04	0.75	14.73
Guernsey	85.45	3.84	4.98	4.98	0.75	14.55
Ayreshire	87.10	3.34	3.85	5.02	0.69	12.90
Shorthorn	87.43	3.32	3.63	4.89	0.73	12.57
Holstein	88.01	3.15	3.45	4.65	0.68	11.93

The composition of milk varies with the individual, age, health, feed, care, environment, excitement, etc. The quantity of the milk given by a cow annually may vary between 700 and 2,000 gallons.

LAUNDERING—A PROCESS OF COLLOID CHEMISTRY

Solids attract, condense matter in proportion to their surface (adsorption). Colloids have large surface, hence strong adsorption. In laundering, the fabric and soap are placed in water and agitated, so that oil, grease and soap become colloidally suspended in water, the soap particles acting as emulsifying agent. They surround oil drops, grease particles, loosening them from fabric. The colloidal soap attracts (adsorbs) dirt particles which with the soap are rinsed away (right).

Above: Washing machine. Clothes are placed in the internal, perforated cylinder revolving alternately in both directions. Soap (Na - palmitate - stearate-oleate), washing soda (Na_2CO_3), borax ($Na_2B_4O_7 \cdot 10H_2O$), some caustic soda Na (OH) and bleaching powder ($CaOCl_2$) are added and steam introduced for chemical, mechanical cleaning and disinfection.

(Harper: Evolution of the Flying Machine)

INFANCY OF AERONAUTICS (Transportation)

Mongolfier brothers succeeded first (1783) in making a balloon to lift man into air. The second not less important step was to propel and control the lighter-than-air craft. Pioneer in this field was Henry Giffard, a French engineer, who drove a cigar-shaped airship, filled with 88,000 cubic feet of coal gas, at six miles an hour by a light steam engine (100 lbs. weight, 5 h. p.). He was unable to make a circular flight. This was achieved by Alberto Santos Dumont, a Brazilian, who with a gasoline engine-driven airship circled around the Eiffel Tower, Paris, in 1901, winning a £4,000 price.

Master Tricks!

It is assumed that all the boys and girls of Pittsburgh and vicinity have been following the adventures of "Inspector Day" in his hunt for "The Duke." Will this master detective apprehend this master criminal and how will he do it? Every boy and girl sending in an advance solution to the problem before midnight tonight, written in 50 words or less, will be mailed a dandy magic trick with full instructions how to do it, whether your solution is right or wrong. Send your letter to "Inspector Day," Sun-Telegraph, Pittsburgh, Pa.

High Speed Trains and Bronxville

We have before us a portrait of a stream-lined passenger train that will bracket the nation in 50 hours.

It is the aero-dynamic express. It has a capsule body, nibbles gasoline and is engined with dirigible propellors.

The thing looks like a silver caterpillar and snubs whistle stops at the organized rate of 90 miles an hour. The windows are unbreakable glass, the structure is mercerized steel and the passengers are optimistic.

High speed of 110 miles per granulated hour can be reached by writing a fan note to the engineer. At that rate you should reach California in 24 hours and have enough mileage left over for a long swim toward Honolulu.

That's speed of the very finest anxiety. It is a little too sudden for The Bug. But we are living in a high-geared age and the railroads are hying up their schedules to meet the tri-motored planes. Passengers can be carried for a cent a mile and hustled three states past their destination free of charge.

The trains are actually built. Both the Union Pacific and all of the Chicago, Burlington and Quinsy have their units all made up. The aero-dynamic rattler is a success. Everything has been figured out except how to stop it.

We haven't got those fat trains yet in the East. But in Bronxville, New York, they have a station cop who won't let you kiss your wife more than three seconds. A lot of married men are moving to Bronxville.

We don't know how that started. Seems the Bronxville couples clogged up the railroad platform waving goodby to each other with their chins. Naturally, the engineer leaned out of the cab window to referee. The firemen thoroughly disapproved of the brakeman yelling, "I'll take the one with the thick glasses."

They're kissing on railroad time in Bronxville. Three seconds. And no hugging. If you go over the three-second limit the yard mechanic taps you on the head with his hammer to see what's wrong with your wheels.

It ain't as bad as you think. Some trains don't stop at Bronxville.

Speed Is Imperative

No Time Should Be Lost in Putting Men to Work on Federal Government Pay.

For work relief in Allegheny County $484,076 has been tentatively allocated by the Federal Civil Works Administration. This will furnish wages to a large number of men.

Unfortunately Director Edward G. Lang, of the Department of Public Works, is almost the only official in the Pittsburgh district who has a work program ready for approval. The promptness with which the CWA funds for unemployment relief have been made available has caught some of the municipalities napping.

They should not lose a day in taking advantage of the federal offer. With the utmost speed compatible with good judgment work programs should be prepared and needy men and women placed on the payroll.

Make It Permanent

Legislative Action Is Necessary to Continue the NRA Ban On Child Labor.

The majority report of the committee which investigated sweatshops in Pennsylvania recommends the enactment of various humanitarian measures, including prohibition of the employment of persons between the ages of 14 and 16 while schools are in session, and ratification of the child labor amendment of the United States Constitution.

A minority report submitted by reactionary members of the Legislature declares there is neither need nor excuse for a single one of these proposals, as they are based on conditions which either no longer exist or are being put out of existence.

The minority no doubt had in mind the NRA ban on child labor. But the NRA codes are only temporary arrangements, and legislative action is necessary if the ban on child labor is to be continued. Such action should be taken, and at this session of the Legislature.

The Justice Racket

Aldermen and Justices of the Peace Should Be Supplanted by Salaried Judges

A committee of the Allegheny County Bar Association makes the praiseworthy recommendation that the offices of aldermen and justices of the peace, paid by fee, shall be done away with, and salaried judges substituted.

If the metropolitan plan, authorized by the Constitutional amendment recently adopted by the people, is put into effect, the way will be paved for such a minor judiciary system in Allegheny County.

It is to be hoped that the Bar Association will not rest content with recommending, but will press vigorously for legislation to correct the evils of which its committee complains.

If it does so, it should prepare for a hard fight; for the squires are strongly organized, are powerful politically, and will not relinquish without a bitter struggle the fees on which they are now fattening.

Our present system of justices of the peace goes back to ox-cart days. When the population was sparse, crimes and lawsuits few, and transportation difficult, the system had merit.

But with the growth of population and litigation, and improvement in traveling methods, there is no good reason why we should not have full-time judges, learned in the law, and paid salaries, to administer justice in petty cases.

An additional reason for a change is the fact that the administration of justice in squires' offices has degenerated into a racket. In their greed for fees, justices of the peace and constables encourage people to resort to lawsuits and prosecutions instead of settling their differences amicably out of court. "J. P." has come to stand for "justice for the plaintiff."

Squire after squire has been caught in dishonesty in Allegheny County, and since the county authorities say it is impossible to make frequent audits of the squires' accounts, we have no assurance that the cheating will not continue.

In their eagerness for fees roving constables sometimes come into Pittsburgh from outside the city and raid disorderly houses, speakeasies and gambling joints that the local authorities have permitted to run. That is about the only redeeming feature, if it can be so called, that the present arrangement has.

Otherwise the system is bad, and should be abolished.

Trade Benefits Assured

Restoration of Friendly Relations With Russia Will Promote Commerce.

On the initiative of President Roosevelt, the United States and Russia have at last resumed normal relations on terms that are entirely honorable, mutually advantageous and in harmony with "a happy tradition of friendship" which existed between these two great peoples for more than a century.

Russia promises "to respect scrupulously the indisputable right of the United States to order its own life within its own jurisdiction in its own way."

This means that Russia will neither disseminate Communist propaganda in this country nor engage in any other form of revolutionary activity on American soil against the government and institutions of the United States.

Americans resident in Russia are assured of freedom of worship, including religious services in English or any other language, in churches of their own leasing or construction.

Under a consular convention to be negotiated immediately American citizens will enjoy all the rights of protection now given by Russia to the nationals of other countries.

Pending a final settlement of all outstanding claims and counter-claims by the customary processes of friendly diplomacy, the Russian government will not prosecute any claims against American citizens and permanently waives all claims growing out of the American military expedition to Siberia in 1918.

These agreements lay firm the foundation for a hearty cooperation between the United States and Russia in the support of common causes, including the promotion of the peace of the world.

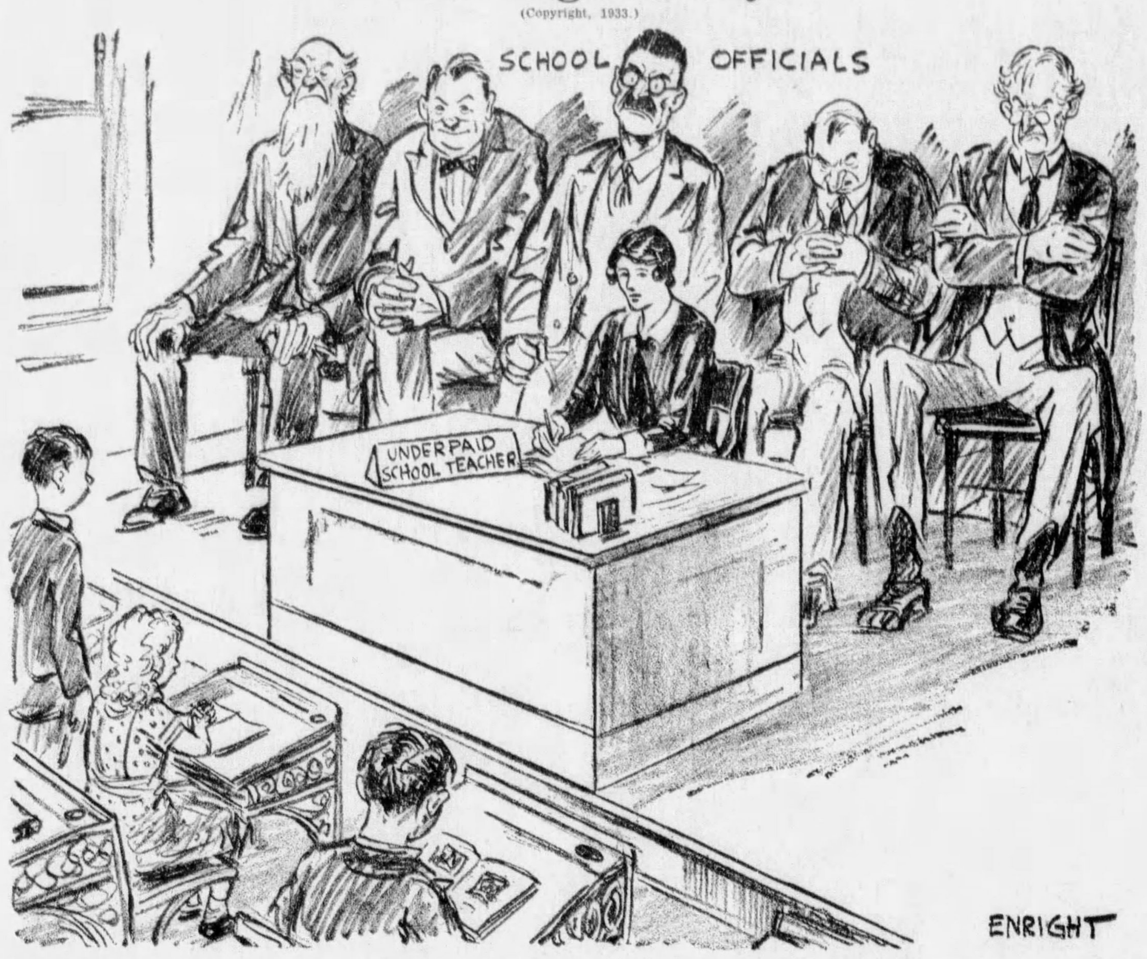
In the light of these agreements it cannot be truthfully said that a desire for trade was the main purpose of the conversations between President Roosevelt and Mr. Litvinoff which have come to such a successful conclusion.

Nevertheless, as the Hearst newspapers in their long advocacy of the restoration of friendly relations with Russia have repeatedly pointed out, friendly political relations promote trade relations and trade relations when maintained on a fair basis promote friendly political relations.

Consequently the return of Russo-American relations to normal should mean the revival of a commerce between Russia and the United States that will greatly benefit both countries and strengthen the ties that bind the two peoples in the same powerful friendship which they once were proud to claim and with renewed pride can now claim again.

Old Fogies' Day

(Copyright, 1933.)



A lot of our current school difficulties derive from this anachronistic survival of obsolete school boards.

Shall we let it continue?

The petty politicians should be retired from the school system, real educators should be put in command throughout, and the fees and perquisites of the politicians should be used for education, not for patronage.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, Nov. 22.—I had no idea wrestling had become the brutal affair it is until watching a recent bout. In other days the tugging and straining were fierce enough but there was always a suspicion of fakery. There can be no deception about the newer method. It's a killing business.

They take running jumps, head and feet first, into each other's midriffs. Heads are crashed with all the force of thrown bodies against the floor. They are hurled into audience laps. I saw one wrestler reel, his arms drop while his nightmare mind tried to grapple with a flicker of reality.

As he stood in an egg-peeled-white daze, his opponent raced the length of the ring and sailed head-first into the pit of his stomach. He sagged with an agonized oof while both lay prostrate and possibly wandering through some field rich with posies. Finally they crawled toward each other like dying gladiators.

They slug, they foul, they even bite. There appears to be not a single rule of decent sportsmanship. The victor staggered to his feet with effort at a swollen smile while groping into the obscurity of a yelling crowd. The vanquished was carried out on a stretcher. And many of us sicken at bullfights.

One of the staunchest of the editorial shop loyalties was expressed by the late newspaper artist, Morris Aleshire. Before his banking days, George Buckley and Aleshire were "tenting under the same rag"—a Chicago paper. While Buckley was making his remarkable recovery from a 22-months strapped-to-a-board illness, Aleshire profusely illustrated a six-page letter to him daily, mailed it to his hospital and doubled the ante on Sunday. Doctors agreed this dirunal dose of cheerfulness had much to do with the astounding comeback.

Charles M. Schwab has long been one of the earlier risers along Riverside Drive, a custom he acquired in puddler days and which he never forsook. The few wayfarers who pass his mansion at 6:30 a. m. are likely to see him strolling about his lawn or wandering to the river edge to toss chips therein for his big police dog to retrieve.

* * *

Mrs. Schwab, lovely, silver-haired and enduring with fortitude an affliction that keeps her mostly in her chair, was proudest—among all the golden wedding gifts received—of the duplicate of her wedding ring Mr. Schwab gave her. The original was a plain gold band modestly flecked with garnets and two small diamonds. It epitomized large slices of self-sacrificing thrift in his struggling-up days.

In despair one morning he turned to the want ads and saw a distinguished gentleman wanted a tutor for his son—a tutor who was "a Harvard man, a high churchman and an athlete." Davis happened to be not one of these but he got the job.

Among the odd flora of the professional litterati is the Euridite Ernest Boyd. He is a sort of swaggering Jo Davidson with a blackthorn stick, wide hat and shinily magnificent red beard, a Dublin-born scholar whose dandelion career has been devoted largely to French translations and considerations of Guy de Maupassant. A quondam theater companion of George Jean Nathan comprises his excursions uptown, but around Washington Square he is a tremendous to-do, an extra biological offspring of all the great literature. Such is the power of a wide hat and bright beard in the waffle shops and coffee houses!

LISTEN, WORLD!

By Elsie Robinson

Our Favorite Indoor Sport

I could have a swell racket. Even in these lean times I could make three times as much as I'm now making, with a quarter the work. No more daily drudgery with editors yelling for copy. No more lonely hours racking the weary old bean, while the rest of the world goes bye-bye or ga-ga. Nothing to do but sit in a pretty office and smile and listen and talk to folks as they come in.

Listen, and talk about what?

Listen to folks talk about themselves. Give them advice about themselves. ASKING AND GETTING ADVICE—there's America's favorite, 20th century, indoor sport. GIVING 'EM THE ADVICE THEY ASK FOR—there's America's fattest, 20th century racket.

As a nation, we've suddenly become self-conscious. We want to know how we're made. Why we do things. Having ourselves analyzed has become a mania with us.

Now mind you, I'm not condemning that mania or even joking about it. We should know how we're made. We should know why we do things. Psychology—though as a science, it's still not jelled—is the best thing that has happened to our human race. We've spent fifty or five hundred million years in a futile attempt to understand and regulate our world. Now, at last, we're realizing that before we can do anything with our world, we must first understand and regulate ourselves. So we're wising up. With some Big Minds leading the way.

All of which is good medicine. The more sensible questions we ask about ourselves, the more sound advice we get in reply, the better off we'll be—PROVIDED.

Provided what?

PROVIDED WE DO SOMETHING WITH THE ADVICE AFTER WE GET IT.

But there's the hitch! We dote on telling our troubles, asking for advice and getting it. And the tougher the analysis, the rougher the advice, the more we like it!

BUT WHEN IT COMES TO APPLYING THAT ADVICE—PUTTING THOSE TIPS INTO PRACTICAL PERFORMANCE—THAT'S SOMETHING ELSE!

For which, of course, there's a very good reason. Seeking advice is a most delightful new way of gratifying our universal egotism. Hitherto, such gratification was largely a forbidden luxury. Well-bred people weren't supposed to talk about themselves. Such talk was held to be an evidence of childish vanity—and a bore. And, most people were usually too busy to waste time on such speculation.

But, with the advent of psychology, all this is changed. We realize that it is not only permissible, but necessary, to talk about ourselves. And not only necessary, but a mutually delightful occupation, since such talk flatters both the adviser and the advised.

Besides all this, what comforting alibis these analyses reveal for our old cowardice and cussedness! Formerly, we had but lame excuses for our laziness and timidity, our silliness and bad temper. Now we can produce Scientific Proof to show how-we-get-that-way.

All of which, as the dumbest can see, is Simply Swell!

But suppose we have to take the advice—then all the fun is spoiled! For at once we're forced to drop out of the spotlight and get busy. And that means lonely, humiliating hard work. We can no longer talk about ourselves, or pity or excuse ourselves, or expect pity or excuses from others. Now we know what-we're-all-about, and we've got to go to work on ourselves. But, gosh, who wants to do THAT!

So what? So this. We modern Americans know more about ourselves AND DO LESS WITH THE INFORMATION than any generation which has ever inhabited the globe. We're chuck full of scientific information — but most of us are sitting around waiting for some Master Mind to hand us a formula which will make it all produce 8 per cent dividends without any effort on our part.

Is this, maybe, one reason why we are where we are?

MARRY-GO-ROUND

By Helen Rowland

Go-Getters and Sticking-Plasters

"This is the age of the go-getter," writes Miss L. B. T., "The laggard lady, who hangs back and shrinks from go-getting her man and from holding onto him when she's got him, is likely to find herself sitting at home with Mother, while the other girls gather in the dates and the wedding-rings."

This typically modern attitude has done more to frighten men away from the altar and cramp their style in love-making than has anything else. Some men are afraid to go near any woman, for fear she may turn out to be a "sticking plaster," from whom they can never detach themselves.

* * *

Modes, manners and methods have changed a lot, in the love-game, of course. And prudes and "prissy" girls and overly shy girls never were popular; but neither were man-chasers or go-getters. And MEN haven't changed an iota!

* * *

I have often wished men WOULD change. Life would be so much happier, and marriage so much less of a gamble, if a man could fall in love with the woman who KNOWS she wants him and admits it, instead of with the girl who is not quite sure that she wants him.

* * *

The broad-minded modern man has accepted every outward insignia of woman's emancipation—her pajamas, trousers, lip-rouge, athletic prowess and economic equality. Theoretically he has even accepted her claim to the right to do the courting and proposing. But he CANNOT forgive a woman for loving him too soon, too much—and especially too LONG!

* * *

The only thing that bores and sickens a man more than the love that is proffered him before he has asked for it is the persistent affection that clings to him like a sticking-plaster after he has wearied of it. Nothing so suffocates a man as for a woman to give him "ALL her love," when he only wanted a little of her time and company. Nothing so frightens him as to hear a girl vowing that she will love him "forever," when he only wanted her to play around with him for a few weeks. Nothing so bores him as to be "forgiven" for neglecting her—when he only wanted to be forgotten!

* * *

No—man is not a monster. He is just a MAN, with the same old masculine traits and inclinations that were born in Adam; and you can't change biology.

* * *

If a woman could only accept the inevitable—if she would only stop struggling to hold ON—onto love, onto a man, onto youth—how much happier and more comfortable she would be.

But the average woman was born a STICKING-PLASTER. And neither time nor experience nor sophistication seems to have cured her.

* * *

It's a wise woman who knows when to let a man GO. But it's a wiser one who does not wait for the bell to ring, but goes, FIRST!

OUR RHYMING OPTIMIST

By Aline Michaelis

Close at Hand

Though men forever clamor
For far and flying things,
The distance holds no glamor,
Enchantment owns no wings.

The mountain heights, which only
To lowland eyes seemed fair,
Are cold and very lonely
When one has clambered there.

The feet that must be roving
Will never find content,
For no bright coin of loving
Is on their pathway spent.

But close at hand, and smiling
Joy waits each seeker's clasp,
And every bliss beguiling
Is ready for his grasp.

No magic and no splendor
But all loved things, and tender,
Beneath his hand abide.

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

SCARCELY MORE than a decade ago, a sandy-haired, gray-eyed, cold-blooded young man told the powers of Europe to go to the devil and take their treaty with them. Instead they went after him and the remnants of a beaten army which he had gathered around him.

But, like the little corporal from Corsica, the sandy-haired young man with the hypnotic gray eyes turned out to be a man of destiny. The statesmen, the politicians and the intriguers of the Continent soon had enough of him and were glad to let him alone. Then he laid aside his sword and went to work building a modern republic out of an ancient Mohammedan kingdom. And while he was tackling this tremendous job in transforming the political and social customs of a country, he danced continuously and played poker with the skill of a Southern Congressman.

And now Mustapha Kemal Pasha, Turkish dictator, celebrates the tenth anniversary of the republic which he created. The cannon boom and millions parade. But there are no veiled women peering from barred windows. One of Mustapha Kemal's most sensational strokes of reform was his liberation of women from the veils, the harems and the seclusion of Moslem tradition.

* * *

Turkish Women Remove Their Veils

"SHOW YOUR faces to the world and look the world in the face," he told them, and almost instantly a million women discarded the veils of custom. They were having their first look at a strange, startling, fascinating world. Women of the upper classes, who had thrilled behind their latticed windows, to romantic fiction, now found the opportunity to be the heroines of their own love affairs.

Marriages decreased, divorces increased. Turkish ladies went on an emotional spree for years, with motion pictures, French dresses and all the rest of the newly-acquired toys and customs and sports of foreign countries. Millions went to France for champagnes, Paris frocks, perfumes and lipsticks. The society women of Istanbul and Angora became the best-dressed women in Europe, the most skillful dancers and the most enthusiastic cocktail drinkers. For years there was a gay whirl and a grand merry-go-round of flirtation, fox-trotting, poker playing and cocktail drinking, while the suddenly liberated ladies had their fling.

But they're settling down now to education and to work. Many women have become noted professors, lawyers and writers. The woman banker, Hatije Hanim, is known throughout the Near East.

The man who is responsible for all this, the Ghazi, the Dictator, is one of the strong men of the age, and one of the most interesting personalities alive. Unlike Hitler and Mussolini, he works almost in silence, saying little, showing himself in public almost never.

His hair is fair and his eyes are a blue-gray, singularly penetrating. He is very well read and likes to talk. He has his clothes made by a famous European tailor and takes much pains with his dress. On official occasion he is punctilious in his devotion to formal attire. He is extremely fond of dancing, and his knowledge of draw poker has surprised several Americans who put their feet under the table with him.

Admiral Sims Calls For More Planes

TALL, SLIM, white-haired Admiral William Snowden Sims, U. S. N., retired, always speaking his mind in uniform or out, thinks we had better build a few hundred more first rate fighting planes. Whatever Admiral Sims says is worth listening to.

Always tart in his remarks and sometimes a bit captious, the handsome and distinguished old sea-fighter, with his neat, pointed beard, and his keen blue eyes, was an obscure young captain in the Navy when he first drew the attention of President Roosevelt by his blunt statement that the Navy's shooting was so bad that it couldn't hit a barndoor from the inside. Roosevelt called Capt. Sims to the White House, shot questions at him, and the result was an improvement in naval marksmanship that put American naval gunners in the front rank of experts.

When the World War came along, Admiral Sims was placed in command of our battleships abroad. The Allies gave him a suitcase full of medals and decorations, but for some reason he rejected the Distinguished Service Medal of his own country. He possesses more foreign decorations, probably, than any other American except Col. Lindbergh, Gen Pershing and Owen D. Young.

Now, at 75, he lives happily and speaks out vigorously in his retirement at Newport, R. I. Many of his sharp remarks have made the first pages. Here's his comment on international politics:

"No nation, as a nation, is respectable. They're all trying to get what they want. If they can get it by power or threat of power, they will. This includes the United States."

This man, who commanded the most powerful fleet of battleships we ever sent into war, had this to say about battleships:

"In a war, the best thing to do with our battleships would be to sink them as far as possible up the Mississippi River, out of harm's way."

The airplane will be the great naval weapon of the future, Admiral Sims believes, putting it this way:

Georgia 'Horrible Example' Of Too Much Government

By James T. Williams, Jr.

WHEN PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT went to Warm Springs, Georgia, to spend Thanksgiving Day, he found himself in a state that typifies the imperative need in this country for that simplication of state and local government which Mr. Roosevelt has so long advocated.

The State of Georgia today, with a population of 2,908,000, is divided into 159 counties. This means that the people of Georgia are taxed to support 159 county governments which are no longer needed. Meantime, thousands of Georgians are losing their homes because they cannot pay taxes on their property. Other thousands of Georgians are destitute and unemployed and dependent upon the federal government for relief.

Georgia schools, like the schools of many other states, are suffering from a shortage of funds, school teachers are underpaid in many instances, and many Georgia children, at the very time when the textile code has abolished child labor, must face the future with no schooling.

But the 159 county governments of Georgia are still doing business. Their officials and their operating expenses are eating up taxes that ought either to be abolished or expended on the upkeep of more and better schools and upon other state services that would benefit the whole state instead of being squandered upon obsolete county governments.

Many States In Same Plight

THE PLIGHT of Georgia is the plight of many other states today which have failed to simplify state and local government to meet the demands of a new day.

The necessity for doing this has long been a favorite theme with Mr. Roosevelt. Many times while he was governor of the State of New York he reminded the people of that state that they were being taxed to support more than 13,000 local units of government.

As governor he used to tell them about "the six or eight layers of government that they were taxed to keep up—federal, state, county and town, electric light district and fire department district, even sidewalk district" government.

But Mr. Roosevelt as governor did not content himself with condemning the outworn system of government "built up in the days of the oxcart and unchanged in the days of the automobile" which the people of Georgia, New York and many other states are taxed to support.

Coupled with his condemnation, Mr. Roosevelt, as governor and as President, has offered constructive criticism which "his neighbors throughout the nation" will do well to apply to their own state and local governments. The remedy, as Mr. Roosevedt sees it, is an awakened and organized public sentiment that will compel the people's elected servants to legislate oxcart government out of existence and replace it with simplified government suited to modern needs.

North Carolina's Good Example

THIS IS what North Carolina began to do under the progressive Governorship of O. Max Gardner. Gov. Gardner first called in an expert outside agency to make a scientific survey of the state system of government. Then, in the light of the facts thus adduced, he went before the Legislature with a reorganization program supported by an argument that was irresistible.

Under his governorship North Carolina rid herself of many of the evils of county government by taking over two of the most important functions any state of the union is called upon to perform—the support and control of public education and the building and maintenance of public highways.

In addition, North Carolina, under Gov. Gardner's administration, wiped out the wicked system of county prisons and jails and chain gangs. The state took over the administration of all penal institutions.

An outside agency made a survey of the state. Virginia now has taken over the supervision of her educational systems and is paving the way for county consolidation, and her highway system has been placed under state governance.

What North Carolina and Virginia have begun to do, Georgia and other states can do and must do before their citizens can get better government at reasonable cost.
